buggy, she does not ask the farmer to deliver the poultry. The handsome traffic officer at King and Richmond sees her coming, further burdened with a considerable supply of green groceries, purchased as she crosses the vegetable market, and he brings the street car and the motors to a standstill until she has safely negotiated this dangerous street intersection.

Down in the market house the patient farmwives sit with their butter, eggs, honey, curries and later berries displayed on the improvised counters. The fish stall, over which there has been a modest business, is doing a good trade, but still, fish will be better, doubtless, after all the plump chickens and turkeys which have been disposed of.

A Pair of Kittens. Along the side of the market house, tired little boys are fondling pet kittens, they hate to part with, but business is busy, even in their young lives. Here are two lovely black Persian kittens at $5 each, and there are hares and rabbits, white, grey, brown and black. The bundles hide three faces taken by the police of different cities in the Dominion are forwarded and kept in the files of the special bureau, however maintain their own bureau of identification as far as finger prints are concerned, being content to take up the cases of persons who have been identified to the central bureau for a report. The advantages of a local bureau are many.

Take, for instance, any city of 50,000 population, more or less, where a well-kept police force is maintained. All persons convicted or detained on suspicion of committing a criminal offence, tramp, vagrant, and like, will be required to have their finger prints taken, irrespective of their nationality or where they come from. These prints will be classified and put in their respective files for future use, and it would not take long to establish a fairly large collection of prints.

Quick Identification. "Supposing some crime is committed in the vicinity of a bureau, and a finger print expert is found by a person who committed it, he would be able to ascertain in a short time (less than five minutes after he has classified the prints found) whether or not the person who committed it had passed through his bureau. If in his bureau he has a duplicate of the prints found at the scene of the crime, then he knows the person, and if not, he is a local man or a tramp or vagrant who has passed through; in fact, he has all the police and the police know as knowing who the criminal is, and once known, it is not often a hard matter to locate him, because copies of his prints can be sent to all police departments, far and near, and who can be on the outlook for him. Tramps, beggars, vagrants and the like usually move in all parts of the country, and as frequently are gathered up by the police, they are usually identified by their prints, and the police know how they may disguise themselves, change their names, etc., their finger prints will identify them, and the police will not require very much intelligence to gather from the foregoing the great value of the finger print system to society and the country in general, and there is no doubt that sooner or later it will be universally adopted as the only positive method of identification in existence. "Supposing every soldier who enlisted in the Great War had been fingerprinted, and his prints kept on file, there would have been no 'unknown warrior,' even if only a hand or a foot had been seen, and the man would be identified by the prints taken from the fingers of that hand and classified could be immediately identified."

IRISH PICNIC BE RECORD BREAKER

Pres. E. C. Killingsworth and Staff Plan To Outshine All Previous Efforts.

Next week is the second week in August, and the week of the annual picnic of the Irish Benevolent Society at Port Stanley are synonymous. On Thursday thousands of sons of the Emerald Isle, whether they be from the north or south of Ireland, will gather at the lake to make their annual event a huge aquatic and athletic festival. The picnic is a record breaker, and the work done by its executive committee is a record breaker. The society aims to make his year the best ever, and President E. C. Killingsworth, who is returning to Germany and surrendering himself for trial by the Leipzig court, maintained in other years.

As usual, a large program of sports, both land and aquatic, has been arranged, in addition to the baby show, the dancing contests and the big event, the picnic. The picnic will be preceded to help in keeping things lively. The London and Port Stanley Railway has arranged to give the picnic the best possible service to and from the Port Philip Dock, who is on the executive of the I. B. S., has seen to this.

tain some distinctive mark, rarely two marks, and in only most cases, the two marks are on the same finger. The ridges from each other either in arrangement or in the number of ridges in a particular square. The total number of combinations possible is the combined number of ridges in one, followed by 60 ciphers, or practically infinity.

This means that there are just so many different combinations, and that the chances are the above number to one that any two prints differ from each other. Now, in order to compare this chance with human chances generally, it is necessary to take the population of the earth, say in round figures 1,500,000,000. As there are about three generations per century, the total number of persons per century would be fifty thousand million. To have enough people to realize all the combinations of ridges in one finger would require a period of two, followed by 48 ciphers, years, and the chances of two prints being alike would be once in that many years.

No Two Are Alike. From the foregoing it would appear to be impossible to ever get two finger prints alike. From the fact that an infant twin has been born with the same ridges as the human fingers never change. They can be destroyed by burning, if they are shot and the pattern is not destroyed, the pattern is only temporarily destroyed, and in the course of time resumes its natural growth again.

One can easily infer from the foregoing that if a person's finger print system, be identified one from the other.

The system now in use throughout the world is that of the police, which is the only system that has as yet been devised. It is a system of identification by means of fingerprints, which are introduced into the United States some years ago, and is now being used by all police departments, as well as by private institutions, such as banks, mercantile houses, insurance companies, etc.

These private firms keep their own classification bureau, as do some of the larger police bureaus. In addition to the central bureaus are maintained, notably at Leavenworth, Washington and New York, where hundreds of thousands of different prints are kept on file.

Headway is Slow. "In Canada the work of making very fast headway, although it is recognized as reliable. There is a central bureau in the Dominion, and the prints taken by the police of different cities in the Dominion are forwarded and kept in the files of the special bureau, however maintain their own bureau of identification as far as finger prints are concerned, being content to take up the cases of persons who have been identified to the central bureau for a report. NOT PROFESSIONAL SUPPORTERS DECLARE

ALD. WARREY, WENIGE

"He can't be referring to me, surely, as one of the professional uplifters," advised Ald. George A. Wenige today, commenting upon an opinion expressed by Ald. Cameron Wilson that the establishment of a juvenile court was but an outlet for some of the "professional uplifters."

"It is a decided slap at those who are so conscientiously upholding the proposed juvenile court scheme," commented Ald. Frank Harley, drawing briefly upon the subject, issued. "I don't want to say anything more about it right at this moment, but it may be that Dr. Wilson thinks he knows what he is talking about when he says the 'professional uplifters' are merely endeavoring to get something out of it."

"Dr. Wilson speaks of the police commission," continued Ald. Harley. "He is slightly in error there, as I believe he will learn, as the chair of the police commission. The latter is but a certain number of men appointed by the city council. The members of the council are the recognized heads of the community, and it is but natural that the services of the police should be made for the establishment of such an institution as the juvenile court."

PAIR CONVICTED ON CHARGE OF THEFT; REMANDED BY COURT

Nick Zocco and John Zaffitella were remanded for sentence in police court this morning after they had been convicted of stealing auto parts valued at $13 from the English Auto Wrecking Company, 749 Simcoe street. Harry White, assistant manager of the company, stated that on Wednesday evening four fenders, one running board, two splash boards, and one engine hood were stolen from the car.

Children told him that the matter at noon Thursday. They said that two men had taken them. The police were notified and Detective Harry Down and Thomas Bolton discovered the goods in a Potterburg garage. On information received there the detectives arrested the two prisoners. Zocco said that he sold a car to Zaffitella, who works in a ditch, for $250.

It was also stated by Zocco that his fellow-prisoner had told him that he had bought the goods, and that they would go to the place and get them. He stated that they waited an hour and a half for English, but learned that two stakes and three chains were stolen. As a matter of fact he had gone to Toronto. Zaffitella said that he intended to pay for the goods, but Zocco declared that he would not steal "junk," but said that if it had been money it would have been a different matter.

"Then you would have no objection to stealing?" queried the court. Zocco replied that he had no objection that the matter was no joke, at least he would not treat it as a joke. Zaffitella said that it was no joke to be in the prisoners' box.

CHIEF BIRRELL SETS PACE FOR DISTRICT

Windsor Follows His Example in Buying Speed Car For Police.

Chief of Police Robert Birrell is leading Western Ontario in making improvements in the methods of police protection. The Windsor police commission followed London's lead when it decided to purchase a high-powered car for the use of the department yesterday. Shortly after Chief Birrell took office and made radical changes in the operation of the department, he saw the need of such a car and was successful in obtaining it.

Last week Chief Dan Thompson of Windsor was in the city. His too, is an officer that believes in keeping the department up to the minute in all matters and when he inspected London's speed car, he went back to the border convinced that it was a necessity, and secured it.

MOORISH CHIEFTAIN'S DESIRE FOR REVENGE, MOTIVE OF UPRISING

Benos Ayres, Aug. 6.—Vengeance for his imprisonment by Spain at the behest of Francisco Franco, the youthful and picturesque Moroccan leader, Abdel Krim, is attributed in a number of reports to the motive of the Moorish tribes against rising, according to a special dispatch today to La Nación from its Melilla correspondent.

"Then you would have no objection to stealing?" queried the court. Zocco replied that he had no objection that the matter was no joke, at least he would not treat it as a joke. Zaffitella said that it was no joke to be in the prisoners' box.

AN INQUIRY AND ITS ANSWER--

THE INQUIRY

We received the following letter the other day:

TO THE EDITOR: About four months ago the Thomas Furniture Company held a Better-Baby Contest and offered prizes for the most perfect babies. Three prizes were to be given. Mothers flocked from all over and gave their valuable time and patience, but had to be turned away because of the lack of doctors to attend to the babies. The prizes which were to have been awarded to the best babies are still in our store, and our store is open to any doctor who will finish this clinic. Furthermore, we are open to receive any suggestion from the mothers who attended this clinic as to the best means of awarding the prizes.

WE OFFER OUR APOLOGIES to the mothers who gave their time to attend this clinic, but the fault, as we have shown, is not ours. However, we would like to hear from them, giving their suggestions as to how we can finish this good work which we began in all good faith.
