position. The momentous question arises as to whether the Emperor's health leaves as to whether the Emperor's health leaves him in possession of ordinary faculties. The war is marked by his usual hesitation, to which is attributed the random and purpossless strategy which has brought disaster to the national arms. The Emperor is now bound to accept battle instantly. He has an entire lack of controlling force and restoring spirit and animation to his defeated army—and this while the enemy is concentrating in and this while the enemy is concentrating in the north of Lorraine, a circumstance which will soon exact the reappearance of England in the character of mediator.

The British Foreign Office has received an imperative demand from Prussia that Eng-land shall cease shipping coal to France or abandon her neutral position.

A Brussels dispatch special from there confirms the statement that France and Prussia have given written pledges to observe the neutrality of Belgium. The condition of Paris is said to be dangerous. The Globe says the Prussian Envoy insisted on criminal proceedings against British pilots serving the French by Ploting vessels of war. The House relused the demand.
