There seems to be a general eruption of cranks. Yesterday an inventor the barged Hicks to take the picture of his patent gallows, and asked the doctor to take it to Guiteau and persuade him to in-sist upon being hanged on one. Hicks replied that if the inventor would go away and hang himself on one of his own scaf-folds he would cheerfully certify to the machine. The inventor then expressed a wil-

GUITEAU WILL READ AN INVOCATION of a personal nature with political a lusions. It is entirely proper in tone and free from feelings of malice or ugliness. Guiteau said yesterday he had not prepared a speech, but said, "I hav written with great care an invocation to the deity which I shall present in case I go off or Friday. I shall present in case I go off on Friday. Hicks has it, and the president has a copy of it." The president has decided to hear no further applications on the assassin's behalf. Can you find any man, no matter what his politics, who will say it has not resulted for the benefit of party and nation? If he and Biaine had been permitted to continue as they ware going, this country would be at war with Chili to-day. It was a good deed and the time will come when I will be looked upon as a patriot.

While Reed was in Guiteau's cell this afternoon, an attendant handed the prisoner a large boquet. "Where did that come from?" asked Guiteau. "From your sister" the guard replied. Guiteau pressed it to his lips and wept bitterly for a few minutes and suddenly conquering his emotion he exclaimed. "This does not become a man about to meet his God for doing God's will." A number of queer people at the White house to-day wanted to see the president in Guitteu's behalf. They were all referred to the executive clerk who heard their requests. They wanted Guiteau respited or pardoned on account of insanity.
