

The Weekly Monitor.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1894.

Our neighbors over the border are just now in the midst of the turrelled and crooked state elections, which are to take place next week, and both parties appear to be working with the degree of interest which usually characterizes a presidential election.

The democratic party has had control of that House during the past four years, having at present something like a two-thirds majority; but, owing to the financial depression, the tide is running so strongly the other way that the republicans hope for a good working majority as the result of next week's election.

Next to the contest for the governorship of New York, between Hill and Wilson, the most important contest in the country is the contest for the district of West Virginia, which is being fought by the republican party, the father of the famous Wilson bill, is engaged in a desperate struggle.

As an idea of the amount of liberty enjoyed by the people of Russia is afforded by the attitude of the press of that country in dealing with the illness of the Czar. While the newspapers of all the rest of the civilized world are freely commenting upon the Czar's illness, the press of Russia is not allowed to make any reference to it, further than to publish daily the two or three line official report given out by the emperor's physician.

How different it is with us! Here the average newspaperman considers it one of his inalienable rights to show up in all the minutest details the moral depravity and inherent wickedness of those set in authority over him.

—Although Monday the 29th inst. was the last day for the addition of names to the preliminary voters' lists, to those who have thus far failed to register, there yet remains a chance for them to do so. As soon as the revising officer has arranged the new names, with lists of those struck off, will be posted in a conspicuous place in each polling district for inspection.

Hitherto our entertainments have been arranged for by American bureaus, but now that one has been established at Toronto, there can be but little difficulty in procuring local and highly competent and able entertainers to act on such much more favorable terms and at less expense than heretofore.

—The deepest sympathy of a very large circle of friends and acquaintances extended to Mr. Walter McCormick in the severe trial he has recently been called to sustain in the loss of his only child, a little son of five years, following within the short period of two months the death of his beloved wife. The little fellow was suffering from a lameness, the site of a recent attack of scarlet fever, and for some time had been under the best medical skill for his treatment, about three weeks ago, Mr. McCormick took him to Boston. About a week later, while still under medical treatment, he was seized with an attack of diphtheria, which, after an illness of eleven days, and so, ended fatally.

—Confirmation Service.

—The rite of confirmation was administered by Bishop Courtney, on Thursday evening last, in the church of St. James, to ten candidates. The church was crowded long before the hour of service had arrived, showing the lively interest which attaches itself to such occasions, indeed principally, no doubt, by the distinction which his lordship the bishop enjoys as an able and eloquent speaker. His address to the candidates was instructive and impressive, and was listened to with rapt attention by all his hearers.
