Many times the two turned to see, and he was there, looking after them; his forehead bared to the clear inspiring wind, his grey hair blown back, his hands clasped. Before descending the trough of a great landwave, they turned for the last time, and saw him standing motionless, the one solitary being in all their wide horizon.

But outside the line of vision there sat a man in a prairie hut, whose eyes travelled over the valley of blue sky stretching away beyond the morning, whose face was pale and cold. For hours he sat unmoving, and when, at last, someone gently touched him on the shoulder, he only shook his head, and went on thinking.

He was busy with the grim ledger of his life.

THE END.

it's not again in bts paid et; and now, for lieve it's at Mary

er again
But I
here will
t shrunk
l lightly,
I for my

ake no

ds Shon, aised his sively to y. Shon he said between

d Father
e, talking
he would
d of their

he prairie,

the truth.