VACCINATION.

SOME OF ITS DANGERS AND THE METHOD OF AVOIDING THEM.

J. A. Loveland, M.D., in Medical World.

"Several years ago I vaccinated a person whose health had always been excellent and who had never had an, kidney disease. The lymph used was bovine, obtained directly from one of the most reliable propagators in the country. The operation was carefully performed, and was a success as far as relates to its primary object. In about a month after vaccination the patient became dropsical. The urine was heavily charged with albumen; the skin was dry; appetite and strength diminished, in short the phenomena of a typical case of acute albuminuria existed. So obvious was the cause of death that no post-mortem examination was made. Authorities mention animal and zymotic poisons as among the causes producing Bright's disease. They speak of scarlet fever, measles, small-pox, as sometimes being the cause of albuminuria. If this is so, there is no good reason why vaccination may not occasionally become an etiological factor. In the case we are considering, the evidence that it was the cause is quite plain. The precise way in which the poison gained an entrance into the system and performed its deadly work, it is impossible to determine. Should Bright's disease arise, even in rare instances, after vaccination the sooner the profession find it out the better it will be for suffering humanity."

Dr. Loveland clearly shows that even so simple a matter as vaccination is liable to result in Bright's disease. Indeed medical authorities state that during the prevalence of small-pox there is albuminuria, and if this is so, undoubtedly vaccination, which produces a mild form of the disease, will be attended by some manifestation thereof.

The fact of the matter is, and it is getting to be more and more recognized every day, a very little disturbance of the system will produce derangements of the kidneys, which, eventually, result in Bright's disease. Overwork, mental or physical; over-anxiety; physical excesses; mental worry; excessive indulgence in certain stimulants and narcotics; irregularities of life and habits; the taking of a cold; changes of season and climate, all have a tendency to affect the system unfavorably and to produce a diseased condition of the kidneys.

People labour under a very erroneous impression who think that such disorders are rare, for it is a matter of record that primarily or secondarily they are the cause of a very large percentage of deaths.

Vaccination is perfectly right and proper, for there is no better preventive known to the profession. A very small amount of vaccine if it "takes," affects the whole system. On the contrary, a very small amount of medicine, if it is of the right kind, has equally powerful effect in the blood when properly administered.

It seems almost like vain repetition to state that pure blood means good health, but it is evident that the belief is popular from the fact that so many so-called remedies are advertised as the best blood purifiers.

Now in order to purify the blood a remedy must be alterative, and in considerable measure a diuretic; that is to say, it must have the elements in it that will act upon the blood as purifiers and will promote the action of the organs which remove the poison from the blood. Unless it has these elements it is absurd to call it a blood purifier.

The tired feeling; the depressed headaches; the fluttering at the stomach, vertigo; a sense of languor; an indescribable feeling of uneasiness and restlessness, all indicate, not disease necessarily of any one organ, but a torpid and heavy condition of the blood. It is impossible to purify a stream except at its source. It is impossible to keep the blood rich unless it is purified by the organs which nature has provided for that purpose.

We have shown, as we think every journalist ought to show to his readers, if able to do so, that the human kidneys are susceptible to the least cause disturbing the natural operation of the system, and it is also known that the organs are provided by nature to remove the waste and poisonous material of the blood and to wash it out of the system. This operation seems very simple, but owing to the fact conceded by the medical profession generally, until the discovery of Warner's safe cure, there was no known remedy which had any certain power over functional or chronic diseases of the kidneys or over blood impurities, consequently blood purification through these organs has been a difficult matter to perform if nature were at all deranged.

It is useless to multiply words on this subject because that remedy has a reputation conceded by the most intelligent physicians, of being without exception the most beneficent discovery in the realm of medicine ever made.

Vaccination is justifiable and proper as a preventive of small-pox, and if the remedy above mentioned is used in connection with the operation of vaccination, it is doubtful if an injurious effect will follow. The manufacturers state that they know from long extended experience in treating the sick, that blood disorders are extremely prevalent and that, judging from their own experience, there can possibly be no agency so effective in preventing and curing such disorders ever known. Children and grown people alike are subject to it and unless nature is given assistance at the proper time by a special agency such as we have named, persons so afflicted must succumb to the forces which are constantly trying to draw them down.
