The Pope's loan has been taken by the Rothschilds. We have considerable information as to the projected search after Sir John Franklin, which appears just now to be exciting much emulation. Captain Austin has been daily at the Admiralty making the arrangements for the Artic expedition he is about to command. Some thirty captains, including among them Captain William Peel, a sin of Sir Robert Peel, and Captain Caffin, formerly of the Scourge, have volunteered their services, and earnestly present for commands in the expedition. Mr. Penny, whom Lady-Franklin has engaged to conduct an independent expedition, has also been at the Admiralty, and has received encouragement and assurance of co-noeration. Sir Henry Pelly, governor of the Budson's Bay Company, has published a letter from Sir John Ross, volunteering his humble services to head an independent expedition in search of his friend Sir John Franklin:—

"Sir John Ross states that the step has been delayed to this late period principally by the sudden death of his patriotic friend Sir Felix Booth; 'on whose further munificence,' Sir John says, 'I had on this occasion de pruded to enable me to perform the sacred promise I made to Sir John Franklin on his departure, that if he were missing in February, 1847. Sir John did offer them; but Government refused, being without blame unfortunately misled by numerous opinions adverse to his, as to send-ing early felicf, and as to the size and description of the ing early Telics, and as to the size and description of the vessels to be employed. The expedition which he proposes will not exceed £3,000; he volunteers his services without fee or reward. He recommends himself for the service by reference to his intimacy with the gallant officers who is to command the Government expedition, with whom there here be could act cordially though they would be independent of each other; his *excellent constitution well adapted and accustomed to a cold climate, and his perfect knowledge of every measurion mecany: his perfect knowledge of Pasish, and facilities in communicating through Danish interpreters with the Equimaux; his experience, gained during aix years' life in Sweden, in sledging with dogs; and his preparations already made in respect of instruments, and the engagement of an icemaster and excellent crew of fourteen men brought up in the whale-fishery.
