

should be set down, so that situations can be resolved before armed conflict breaks out.

Canada will continue to contribute its fair share in any UN peacekeeping action, but the complexity, scope and number of predictable operations will require greater participation by other member countries as well.