

which stands the Citadel. Here for several miles the passenger has also a magnificent view of the Beauport Slopes and of the celebrated Falls of Montmorenci. This is the only point from which a full face view of the falls is obtained, as well as of the Island of Orleans, nine miles below Quebec, and an extended view down the River St. Lawrence as far as the eye can reach; arriving at Harlaka Junction, the transfer station with the Intercolonial Ry., for passengers from the south going to River du Loup, Cacouna, all sea-bathing points along the St. Lawrence, Halifax and all points in the Maritime Provinces. Harlaka is situated on a new part of the line called the St. Charles Branch; this branch was completed during the past year, and gives the Railway a frontage on the St. Lawrence River immediately opposite Quebec. At St. Henry Junction, the line of the Intercolonial

VIEW OF QUEBEC FROM POINT LEVIS.