

thick back, shoulders, and hams. The two classes are represented chiefly by the following breeds:

Bacon Hogs :

Yorkshire.	Tamworth.
Berkshire.

Lard Hogs :

Duroc-Jersey.	Poland China.

Other breeds represented are the Hampshire, an intermediate type, and the Chester White, which is a large, lard hog.

Poultry. The keeping of poultry is common to the country and town or city lot. In the towns and cities the interest is largely limited to chickens; in the country, ducks, geese, and turkeys are also raised. In addition to their value for their eggs, flesh, and feathers, the different kinds of poultry help to destroy insects. Chickens are of great variety, but fall into three general types, which may be called egg breeds, general purpose breeds, and meat breeds, of which a few representatives are given:

Egg Breeds :

Leghorn.	Minorca.	Spanish.

General Purpose Breeds :

Plymouth Rocks.	Orpingtons.
Rhode Island Reds.	Dorkings.
Wyandottes.
