SAGE ADVICE FOR MARRIAGEABLE MEN

By One Whose Expectations Were Blighted by the Frost of Disappointment.

A man who passed through the bitter experience has said: "If you marry a sweet young maid of half your years with the idea of educating her for similarity of tastes and companionship for declining years, ten to one Cupid will start a rival kindergarten not far along life's way." Concerning this we have to say, that if the temperament, tastes and treatment of the young wife are right lines, we believe the little god of love would only have for his school the two pupils whom the marriage tie has bound together.
