Commenting on this latest scheme, The Tribune says:

No one but an Irishman probably could have conceived the idea of a hospital relief ship for the Boers, which it is announced the Ancient Order of Hibernians of Philadelphia intends to fit out. Is this a leeplaid scheme to divert, by putting the Transval flag on the high seas, the attention of the British navy, and prevent a haval of the British navy, and prevent a naval bombardment of Pretoria? Or is the relief ship to be a prairie schooner, and reach the scene of its operations overland through Darkest Africa?
