

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

"CONSTANCY"

It is something sweet! when the world goes ill, To know you are faithful and love me!

To feel when the sunshine has left the skies, The love-light shining in your dear eyes!

Beautiful eyes—more dear to me Than the tenderest eyes of earth could be!

It is something, dearest, to feel you near, When life, with its sorrows, seems hard to bear; To feel when I fainter, the clasp divine Of your tender and trusting hand in mine.

(Beautiful hand! dearer to me Than the beautiful things of earth wrong, Sometimes, dearest, the world goes wrong, For God gives grief with His gift of love.)

And poverty, too—But your love is more To me than riches and golden store, The beautiful love—old death small part Is mine, as you are, my own sweet heart!

—Frank L. Stanton.

In the World of Fashion.

The late season's models in millinery are altogether bewitching, things quite apart from the hats to which we have grown accustomed during the springtime. Not that spring shapes and trimmings are out of date. Far from it, but the usual weighing and balancing of experimental modes has taken place, certain models have been found and retained; others have been found wanting and relegated to the indiscriminating buyers.

Lighter and more summery trimmings have given a new aspect to some of the familiar shapes, and moreover, a host of new ideas or of new variations upon old ideas have been sent across seas to us within the past month or two. Having noted the emphatic favor accorded to directorate modes, the Parisian milliners and the Parisian dressmakers have turned their attention chiefly to experiment with the fashion ideas of that period and have evolved many quaint fantasies and a few undeniably charming creations; but they have not confined themselves to directorate times in their search for inspiration and have seized upon picturesque ideas wherever found. One can have high crowns or low, broad brims or narrow, and the majority of the midsummer hats are moderate in size, the exceptions are numerous.

Dotted net is much in use for the big draped crown and plaited frills, the latter edged with lace, or in certain chic models, bordered by a very narrow line of white fancy straw, supplied enough to fall into the plaiting of the frills. Plain nets of various lines, from coarse butter color net to finest white tulle, are in order for the bonnet, and the frills may be entirely of plaited lace instead of net.

Combinations of net or lace and straw are also in vogue for bonnets such as described above. The top of the large high crown, for example, may be of rough, light, pure white straw. The sides of the crown are covered by a wide, full, loose puff of net thru which a wide scarf of pink radium is run. Two oval-shaped pieces of net form the net form the drooping brim, the sides of the crown are bordered by these frills. The silk scarf knots in a big soft bow at the left, and a cluster of small pink roses nestles among the falling frills on the other side.

Another hat having draped crown of net and lace, a brim of leghorn and a simple rill of lace falling over this straw brim quite to its edge. The brim dips sharply to the ground and is quite wide at the back, but narrow toward the front, running in sharply at the centre front, so that it is not more than two or three inches wide at this point. This shapely at the brim is popular thruout the province of the bonnet, and is becoming because it leaves the front hair and forehead uncovered, while furnishing a soft, clinging fullness around the sides and back of the head. The width of the back brim frills varies, but the frills may fall in the correct and graceful lines so that the crown drapery may have the right support. In fact, this new old bonnet in its really successful form calls for a designer who is an artist, and workers capable of materializing his ideas.

The Aberdeen Association

Thru Countess Grey, the president, the Aberdeen Association is appealing for support.

Organized over 17 years ago, thru the initiation and personal efforts of Lady Aberdeen, the Aberdeen Association stands for a single idea—the distribution of good literature to settlers in isolated parts of Canada. It is absolutely free from all bias—political, social or denominational. Its mission is to brighten the homes of Canada's new citizens in the remote districts of the great Northwest; to furnish the means of education and recreation to those sturdy pioneers who are doing so much to strengthen and enrich the Dominion. The object of the Aberdeen Association is, therefore, not merely philanthropic; it is patriotic in the broadest sense of the term.

The parent branch of the association was formed at Winnipeg in 1890. Three years later a second branch was organized at Halifax. Others were formed in rapid succession, until to-day the association embraces 17 branches, with a central organization at Ottawa. For several years the work was confined to the distribution of literature to individual settlers, the effectiveness of which is proved by hundreds of grateful letters received year by year at the different branches. In recent application for literature is carefully investigated, and there is no doubt that the parcels of books and magazines sent out, go where they will do the most good.

The magnitude of this branch of the association's work may be gathered from the fact that up to the present time nearly a quarter of a million parcels of carefully selected literature have been distributed thruout the Dominion. The association at present has on its list about 1300 names, to which literature is sent periodically. Three years ago, with the object of increasing the effectiveness of the work, and meeting changed conditions in the west, it was decided to establish a financial support.

Contributions may be sent either direct to the general treasurer, Col. Fred. White, C.M.G., Ottawa; or to the general treasurer, thru the secretaries of branches in the several cities:

Mme. A. Gagnon, 61 Viger-avenue, Montreal; Miss M. C. Featherstonhaugh, 230 Central-avenue, London, Ont.; Miss Florence L. Barker, 14 Ardlen-avenue, Hamilton; Miss M. Redden, King-street, Kingston, Ont.; Miss H. May Ward, 48 Summer-street, St. John, N. B.; Miss Scott, Kingsley Building, South-street, Halifax, N.S.; Mrs. D. H. Laird, 63 Edmondson-street, Winnipeg; Mrs. M. C. Moore, Calgary, Alta.; Mrs. W. E. Gravelle, 1315 Georgia-street, Vancouver, B.C.; Miss L. Angus, 95 Becher-street, Victoria, B.C.; Lawrence J. Burpee, Ottawa is hon secretary.

It has already become apparent, however, that very limited and uncertain sources of revenue will not begin to meet the demands of this new and rapidly growing project. Since 1894 the postoffice, recognizing the far-reaching benefits conferred by the class of letters, has granted them a special value to the most desirable class of letters, has carried parcels of literature free thru the mails, under certain limitations as to size, and one or two of the railways and steamship companies have granted them similar privileges; but the pressure of regular mail and freight traffic may at any moment cause the favors to be withdrawn, and there are many other expenses connected with the collection and distribution of literature, especially in the form of libraries, which can only be met by the provision of an adequate annual revenue. It is imperative that provision should be made for a permanent secretary, whose whole time could be devoted to the interests of the association, and who would be free to personally inspect the work in the west from time to time and organize it upon the most efficient basis. All this requires money, and that is the crying need of the association at the present moment.

As the members of the association gain this time to the furtherance of a work which they believe to be of the highest importance to the nation, they philanthropic and patriotic grounds, to their fellow-countrymen thruout the Do-

DOCTORS CALLED

CHRONIC ULCERS COVERED HER BODY & CRIPPLED HER.

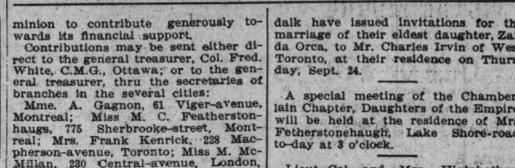

HOW CURE CAME

How Zam-Buk cures chronic ulcers and sores is seen by the following experience of Mrs. Beers, of 1 Original, Ont. She says: "I was 35 years old and I had been suffering with ulcers and sores broke out on my legs and different parts of my body, and spread to an alarming extent, causing me great agony. I began to try salves, oils and medicines of various kinds, but the sores refused to heal. I consulted several men, who treated me for some time, but the ulceration continued just as bad as ever. Another medical man was consulted, then another, and one after another until I had tried five different Doctors. All gave me up in despair. The ulceration and the skin disease were getting worse all the time, so I then went into the Hospital. I was there three months and came away very little better. I next went to another Hospital, and stayed there three months—again with no success. By this time my legs were covered with sores, my bones seemed all picked out with ulcers, and I could not walk without the use of a cane and a crutch. I was in such a shocking condition that I was long for death.

"I saw a report of the value of Zam-Buk and I obtained a small supply. This did me so much good I bought a further supply. A few weeks steady use of this wonderful balm healed the ulcers, removed the sores and I am today completely cured. For many years I was obliged to sit in a chair and walk. Now I have thrown both cane and crutch away, and feel as well and vigorous as at the age of 30."

lish small circulating libraries in the newly-settled districts, wherever there was sufficient population to make it worth while. This system of libraries is still in the experimental stage, but the results so far achieved lead to the belief that the association will find here an even broader field of usefulness than in its distribution of literature to individual settlers.

It has already become apparent, however, that very limited and uncertain sources of revenue will not begin to meet the demands of this new and rapidly growing project. Public Amusements

For an engagement of one week beginning Monday at the Princess Theatre Henry B. Harris, America's foremost producer, will offer Edgar Selwyn's "Pierre of the Plains," written by Mr. Selwyn from Sir Gilbert Parker's fascinating and dramatic stories, "Pierre and His People."

The play relates the story of Val Galbraith, son of Peter Galbraith, owner of a road house in Canada near the Montana border. Val has killed an Indian, a terrible offence, as soon as the Indians are held as the wards of the government. Orders are given by the Northwest Mounted Police for the arrest of Val, and Sergeant Tom Redding is sent to Port Desire to deliver the papers. "Pierre of the Plains" (Mr. Selwyn), a half-breed and gambler, as well known to the police as to the road houses which he frequents, hears of the capture of Val, and he, horse and rider to Galbraith's place.

Thru his love for Jen, the daughter of the elder Galbraith, he tries to frustrate the plans of the police, and he temporarily accomplishes by the strategic detaining of Sergeant Redding at his not being into the desert, and who addresses Sergeant Redding, and alters the papers herself after she has found the same excellent care of fallen asleep, will not carry out the command, thereby serving the papers which will convict her own brother, Val, of murder. It is Val's escape and Pierre's capture that furnish the dramatic incidents of the play.

Starting Saturday matinee the Imperial Opera Company at the Alexandra will offer "The Circus Girl," an English musical comedy which obtained a world-wide reputation when originally produced in London. It contains a great many sparkling musical numbers and offers probably more humorous comedy than any other piece now on the American stage. The comedy comes in such a continual flow and is so humorous and so complex "The Circus Girl" has become known as a terror to stage directors and few can be found with the courage to undertake its production. In order to properly produce the piece the stage director must have a large, well drilled chorus at his disposal and above all an almost inexhaustible list of principals endowed with music talent and experience. Possessing these, Harry Girard has undertaken the production with undoubted courage and on Saturday will offer a perfect reproduction.

Call Spooner, the clever little star who made such a favorable impression upon theatregoers last season, comes to the Grand next week in a new comedy drama, "The Girl and the Detective." In this her new play she will have the support of the same excellent cast of dramatic artists who have been with her for the past two years. There is plenty of opportunity, it is said, in this new play for Miss Spooner to show her wonderful versatility, as she plays a waltz of the streets.

ROGERS' COAL

HEAD OFFICE: KING STREET, TORONTO

At a meeting of the industrial school board in the city hall yesterday afternoon, ways and means were discussed for the raising of the funds needed to complete the new workshop at Mimico, which Superintendent Ferrier estimated would cost $14,000 to build. The insurance on the buildings burned a few months ago amounted to $16,000. Superintendent Ferrier reported a few attempts at escape during the summer and three boys still enjoying their liberty, but there has also been many attempts to escape from penal institutions during the past few months.

"Our boys," said the superintendent, "have behaved remarkably well; not only in their school life, but upon every occasion where they appeared in public."

Teas may come, and teas may go, but "Salada" goes on—slowly, but surely winning its way into the homes of millions of satisfied users.
