LOCAL DEBATERS DEFEATED BY VISITING TEAM

Cambridge Trio Score 3 to 1
Victory in High School
Contest

By a general vote of three to one, the visiting Cambridge University team defeated a Saint John team last night. The debate, which was held in the High school, was poorly attended, but those who did attend were amply rewarded. Saint John upheld the affirmative of the subject, "Resolved that this house opposes the growing tendency of governments to invade the rights of individuals." The local team, captained by Leo Cain, B. A., opened the debate.

In introducing the speakers, Sir Douglas Hazen welcomed the visitors to Saint John and expressed the hope that they would enjoy their stay here and carry back home with them good impressions of the new world.

OPENS DEBATE

Mr. Cain, the first speaker, traced the advance of constitutional rights from the middle ages until the present day and distinguished between relative rights and absolute rights. He spoke of the Cromwell period as one of gloom in which the rights of individuals were restricted, pointing to the Pilgrims as an example. It was a period of moral mourning when a smile on a person's countenance was looked upon as a violation by the devil.

"Today," he stated, "legislation is passed without any consideration for the individual." He pointed to the recent upheaval in Mexican religious circles as a shining example of the governmental restriction of religious liberty. It was impossible to enforce some acts which were not popular, and he pointed to the prohibition acts in some places. He stated that individual initiative was good for any country and remarked that even those who held extreme Socialistic views admitted it.

CAMBRIDGE MAN

W. B. Fordham, of the Cambridge team, followed Mr. Cain and contented himself, as did the other visitors, with mainly breaking down and refuting the arguments set forth by the affirmative. He stated that Mr. Cain had used many quotations, notable among them some by Blackstone of the 18th period, but he had failed to tell the period in which he lived and even whether he was a member of the bar. He also stated that Mr. Cain had made a sweeping statement that there was too much legislation.

In answer to the query of Mr. Cain's as to who would have the temerity to ask where this legislation would stop, he answered that the people would quickly answer this question. Being a democratic country, the government was of the people and they alone had the right to say what should be enacted and what should not.

SECOND SPEAKER

George Hudson, the second speaker of the affirmative, gave some additional examples of the encroachments of governments on the rights of individuals when he pointed out the Pilgrim exodus from the shores of England in the 17th century. He read some statistics and examples taken from middle age days in England when people were required to dress in a certain manner, some articles of apparel were prohibited from wearing due to their position in society.

ABLE ADDRESS

In a very able address A. L. Hutchinson, the second member of the visiting team, refuted the arguments of Mr. Hudson. If the laws, he said, were falling into disuse they were not interfering with the rights of any individual. In regard to non-enforcement of the prohibition Act in some quarters, he pointed out that the will of the people prevailed. Governments were appointed by a majority of the people and the majorities invariably ruled. He traced the growth in industrial, financial and housing life of the people during the last 50 years and noted the tremendous growth.

Cyril Allison closed the debate for Saint John, in which he gave some interesting figures to show the value of some legislation in the republic to the south.

Like his predecessors, H. G. G. Herklotz, the third member of the visiting team, mainly limited himself to refutation of arguments. He created a laugh when he said that were to buy cloth at $3 per yard it would be a good thing, because as a rule people had to pay more than that for it now. In regard to non-enforcement of certain laws he stated that laws which are not enforced do not invade the rights of individuals.

CONGRATULATES SPEAKERS

After short rebuttals by Messrs. Fordham and Cain, in which they mainly confined themselves to refutations of previous arguments, Sir Douglas Hazen congratulated both sides for the able arguments they had offered, the manner in which it was presented and the refutation advanced. He stated

Keeping Your Schoolgirl Complexion

Never Let Make-up
Remain on your skin
over night

Do this if you are or rouge ever touches your face—note then the great difference that comes

COUNTLESS women make the great mistake of permitting make-up to remain on their faces over night.

Poor complexion thus often comes. Yet, used rightly, powder, rouge and make-up will not injure.

The rule below is one, according to authorities, every woman who ever touches make-up to her face should follow. Authorities urge it.

Most women of the stage (great users of cosmetics) employ it. All one needs to follow it is a 10c cake of Palmolive.

Remove this way
Powders, rouge and all cosmetics have a tendency to clog the pores of the face and to enlarge them. Blackheads and disfigurements often follow. Never let make-up stay on over night. This is all-important, a fundamental in correct skin care.

Wash your face gently with Palmolive Soap, massaging it softly into the skin. Rinse thoroughly. Then repeat both washing and rinsing. Apply a touch of cold cream—that is all.

Follow this rule. Your skin will be soft and lovely. As the months roll by, you'll need fewer and fewer cosmetics.

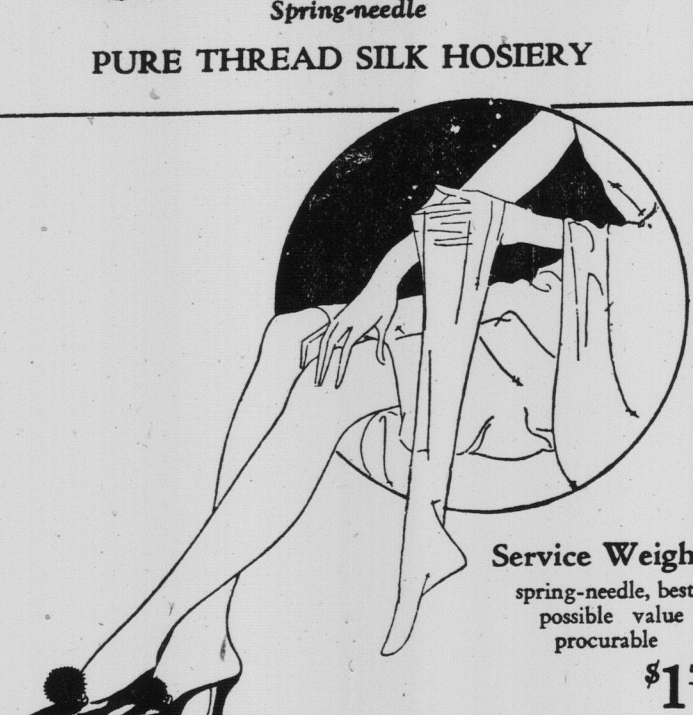

Do not use ordinary soaps in the treatment above. Do not think any green soap or represented as of palm and olive oils, is the same as Palmolive.

Be sure you get the real Palmolive
Remember that before Palmolive came, women were told, "use no soap on your face." Soaps then were judged too harsh. Palmolive is a beauty soap made for one purpose only: to safeguard your complexion. 60 years of soap study stand behind it. Millions of pretty skins prove its gentle safety beyond all doubt.

And it costs but 10c the cake—so little that millions let it do for their bodies what it does for their faces. Obtain Palmolive today. Note what an amazing difference one week makes. The Palmolive Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 3174c
