The real danger now appears to be from the more radical element of the population. At the same time there is doubtless ground for truth in Mr. Gernard's assertion that "the fallure of the United States to ratify the peace treaty emboldened the Junkers to bring about the present political crisis."

UPS AND DOWNS.

All mortals have their ups and downs, in all the modern styles; one day they wilt 'neathe Fortune's frowns, the next enjoy her smiles. I gambol when I have an up, and when a down appears, I try to drink my bitter cup without unmanly tears. Some men put up a gorgeous front when all things come their way; they blithely tackle every stunt, their curves are glad and gay. They move with an elastic step, the bluff they make is tall; we say, "These men are full of pep, they're winners, one and all." We've only seen them when the ups have filled their money vats, and they're as chipper as the pups that chase the willage cats. But with the dismal downs on deck, they show up cheap and stale, and they invoke the name of Heck, and raise a plaintive wait. And we, who wondered and admired when they pawed up the dirt, confess that people make us tired who shrivel when they're hurt. Sane people calmly take their joys, and do not tear their gowns, or make a woful, sobbing noise, when ups give way to downs.

selves. There was, however, a second hope which the militarists must have cherished: that they would be accepted as the agents of a strengthened and united Germany. But the result of their adventure has been the other way. Prussia is itself divided and the southern states stand with the Ebert government. Instead of bringing new vigor to the Fatherland, the Germans now see Kapp and Luettwitz bringing the threat of national dismemberment."

The cables from Germany show that this is a correct review of the situation. There is great unrest in the country, and Indeed one American journal, the New York Evenlag Post, holds that a return to militarism is impossible because the militarists had been shown to be in a minority even before the war. We quote:

"The coup a Berlin was delivered by a very small minority against an overwhelming majority. The German parties whom Kapp challenged were for a long time before the fall of the Hohenzollerns a preponderant majority in the Reichatag elections of 1912 the Social Democrats and Centrists lad an absolute majority of the twelve million votes cast.
