DEALERS ATTEMPTED TO SELL CONDEMNED MEAT

But Boston Board of Health Steps In and Threatens to Destroy It—Court May Decide.

BOSTON, Mass., April 9.—Unless the meat-packing concerns of Boston attempt to bring about a settlement of their controversy with the Boston Board of Health relative to the disposition of meat condemned on account of tuberculosis, the board will order the meat destroyed. That such a decision had been made was made known today when the board sent an ultimatum to the proprietor of a Brighton abattoir who yesterday attempted to remove, for sale outside of the state must which had been condemned. Under the law of 1908, the flesh of animals who have suffered from tuberculosis is condemned. The health board officially believes that the law is unfair and that the meat is not infected and should not be condemned but they have no alternative but to enforce the law. The board desires the meat dealers to have the courts pass upon the law as it now stands or else get relief from the legislature. It has been suggested that the meat dealers ask the courts for an injunction to prevent the board of health interfering with the slaughtering business. The board had permitted the meat dealers to place in their refrigerators meat which had been condemned and it was not until the dealers attempted to remove such meat for sale that the board was forced to take action.

THE TRUE HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY

In recent years it might seem that economy and housekeeping could never be coupled together. Prices have soared and wants increased until it takes three times as much to live as it did a decade ago. To many women economy is synonymous with meanness and is only practiced when stern necessity forces it. Yet the most economical housekeepers are often those where money is not a particular consideration.

What most housekeepers need to learn is the difference between waste and prudence. One can live lavishly and yet economically, and can pride herself on saving yet really waste shamefully. Economy is not having small bills and living simply; it is watching the leaks and possessing the power to get the best results at the least cost, whether necessary or not. No matter what her income, the woman who knows how to manage her money is a housewife. She pays bills with a definite idea for what she is paying, and whether half of it is necessary expenditure, is as censurable as the thrifless wife of a poor man.

ELEGANCE WITH ECONOMY. Everyone should live as well as she can afford; it is a false idea that there is anything praiseworthy in stinginess or a mean style of housekeeping. The greater beauty and daintiness one can bring into the family life the greater are the refining influences. The mistake lies in thinking one cannot live daintily, even elegantly, and with economy as well. There are housekeepers who get better results on a limited income than other women with three times the money to spend in running a house. Economy is less the allowance than the thought that he put into disbanding that allowance. The economical housekeeper is educated in household lore. She can be fooled neither by tradesmen nor servants.

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP.

There is many a man and woman tossing about after night upon a sleepless bed. Their eyes do not close in the sweet and refreshing repose that comes to those whose heart and nerves are right. Some constitutional disturbance, worry or disease has so debilitated and irritated the nervous system, that it cannot be quieted.

Or again, you have, a sinking sensation, a feeling you are going to die; or perhaps you wake in your sleep feeling as though you were about to choke or smother, and rest leaves you for the night. If you allow these conditions to continue for a short period even, you will begin to feel your health declining. It is the nerves and heart not acting rightly, and they can only be set right by the use of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. They soon induce healthy, refreshing sleep, not by deadening the nerves, but by restoring them to healthy action.

Mrs. E. Nutt, St. Mary's, Ont., writes:—"I can gladly recommend your Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills as I was greatly troubled with my nerves. I was so bad I could not sleep at night without the lamp burning, but after taking four boxes of the pills I became all right again."

Price, 50 cents per box; 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or The F. W. Daniel & Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

She has shrewd ideas of values and knows if she is getting the worth of her money.

PERSONAL BUYING.

The economical housekeeper, especially if she must make a small sum go a long way, does not trust her buying to others. She does her own ordering. Wherever possible, she pays cash. There is no greater foe to economy than the monthly household bill. To buy with money in the purse or with only vague dreams of a later day of reckoning is so widely divergent as to clear lease and a house mortgaged to its roof.

Never does the economical housekeeper buy foods out of season, nor furnish her house and table linen with the latest fad. Her table, though ample and daintily served, is not run for appearances with palates trained above wholesome inexpensive foods.

Never does the economical housekeeper buy things that are bought at least twice as much as they are worth. Pool is never thrown out, but by skillful handling is utilized down to the least scrap. A hostess may be the greatest waster of money, therefore the woman who is economical sees that they are carefully managed. This does not mean treating the family nor ruining valuable eyeglasses, doctor and oculist's bills have not yet been classed as money-savers. While plenty of gas or electric light is allowed, the family is encouraged into sociability, so there is not a burr in the room. Everyone is trained to turn out the light when leaving a room. Matches are cheaper than lighting. In addition, a study is made of the burners that will give the best light at least cost. It behooves the economical housekeeper to learn not only about draughts, but about kinds of coal that will give heat with the least consumption.

HOW TO USE "SALES."

Keeping up the supply of household linen is a costly business. It is here where the economical housekeeper shines. She knows that it is ruinous to let supplies run so low that everything must be renewed at once. She also knows the bargain days which are really worth while are reliable firms. A few pieces bought each time bargains are offered is a great saving. The best economy is not to sight because one has so little to spend, but to contrive that that little does the work of much more. Judicious buying and an interest in results promote household economy that no one would call mean.

RAT GREATER FOE

THAN DEADLY COBRA

Damage Done by Voracious Rodent Mounts Up to Millions in England Alone.

LONDON, April 10.—Rats are more numerous and aggressive than they have ever been before, said Sir James Orliston-Brown, speaking yesterday at the first annual meeting of the Society for the Extirpation of Vermin at 20 Hagover Square.

It was officially estimated in France, he added, that the damage to crops by field mice was $5,000,000 per annum. The calculation that there was one rat to every acre in England and Wales, and that each rat did damage to the extent of 1 farthing every day, making the total loss per annum $75,000,000, was, if anything, short of the mark.

A poultry fancier in Dorsetshire told them that his loss last year by rats was $400. The owner of a flour mill lost $700 per annum by the gnawing of sacks alone. Some factors of house property in Glasgow stated that their bill for damage by rats amounted to $2,000 per annum. The secretary of a soap company said that $2,500 per annum was the smallest computation of the company's loss through rats. A leather merchant lost $5 a week through the gnawing of his goods, and a silk merchant in the city said that rats got in his warehouse and in one night did $400 worth of damage.

By boring communications from drains into dwellings, by gnawing through water pipes and gas pipes, by gnawing at food, by causing loss of sleep and nervous trepidation, rats have been responsible for sickness, disability and death to a large extent. Professor Anderson said that the damage done by rats in this country was greater than the damage done by the cobra and tiger in India.

The rat was one of the cleverest and shrewdest of animals. Its brain was large in proportion to its body, and its persistence and ingenuity in overcoming obstacles, such as engineering eggs up and down stairs without break in them and living upon billiard balls when there was nothing else to eat, would almost provoke admiration and pity for its fate were it not that it was so despicable.

The society must not promise immediate extermination. It would be some time before the last rat was granted a retiring pension. That much might be done rapidly in the extermination of rats was shown by Denmark. Under a law which came into force in 1907 provision was made for the payment of a premium for every rat delivered to the local authority. In the first year 1,388,000 rats were handed in and the premiums paid for them.

KETTLEDRUM A PERFECT INSTRUMENT.

(From the London Standard). The Kettledrum. Mr. Gabriel Cleather contended, was perfectly competent to produce atmosphere as well as rhythm. Even to tune the instrument three things were required—a perfect musical ear, a fine sense of touch, and five years experience. After playing over a kettledrum melody written eighty years ago from Meyerbeer's "Robert le Diable," Mr. Cleather continued: "I venture to say that outside of the musical profession not one person in a hundred of those who listen to an orchestra today knows that timpani have notes and can give out a melody." No instrument, he added, had a greater range of power than the kettledrum, for none could be played more softly and none had greater penetrating power.

"Goodness, Johnny, how you're growing. If you don't look out you'll be bigger than your father soon."

"Geel! Wouldn't that be swell!"

"Why, then they'd have to cut my old trousers down to fit him."

PRETTY NOSES LOST IN UGLY PARIS HATS

Stern Fashion Decees That Woman's Profile Absolutely Disappears.

PARIS, April 10.—What has happened to the profiles of the Parisian women? They have mysteriously disappeared, extinguished by the latest fashion in hats.

Paris will be remembered in centuries to come as having destroyed the accepted ideal of beauty—the pure Greek profile—and invented a new standard of its own.

The smart woman, when she deigns to walk in the streets of Paris, presents the strangest of silhouettes. The outworn coat tails of her paletot, the absolutely straight line of her hair, the hat worn so low on her head that no sign of her neck is visible, form a curious ensemble.

Profiles were at one time worth considering, but Paris has decreed that profiles are no more. Some women with pretty noses still insist, despite the milliners, on part of the aristocratic feature showing. But they are few. The majority are content to bury themselves under a coal scuttle or helmet hat.

We get a vision of half a short-pink ear and a rounded chin. So much for the side view. Full face, we catch a brief glimpse of large, dark eyes. The color of the hair we must guess.

Any other woman would look ridiculous, but the lady of the lost profile is quite alluring.

All the details of her toilet are perfect, from the tiny, suede-gloved hands to the small, snub-nosed shoes. We are bound to admire her, although the shape of her nose must remain a mystery.
