Poetry.

THE CARELESS WORD.

A word is ringing through my brain,
It was not meant to give me pain;
It had no tone to bid it stay,
When other things had pa-sed away;
It had more meaning more than all
Which in an idle hour fall;
It was when first the sound I heard
A lightly uttered, careless word.

That word—O! it doth haunt me now,
In scenes of joy, in scenes of woe,
By night, by day, in sun or shade,
When the half smile that gently played
Rosy-cheekily, and gave the sound
Eternal power through life to wound,
There is no voice I ever heard,
So deeply fixed as that one word.

When in the laughing crowd some tone,
Like those whose joyous sound is gone,
Strikes on my ear, I shrink—for then
The cate-s word come back again.
When all alone I sit and gaze
Upon the cheerful bonfire blaze,
So freshly, as when first 'twas heard,
Returns that lightly uttered word.

When dreams bring back the days of old,
With all that wishes could not hold,
And from the fevered couch I start
And its beating echoes clear,
That little word I seem to hear;
In vain I say, while it is hard,
Why weep?—'twas but a foolish word.

It comes, and with it come the tears—
The hopes—the joys of former years;
Forgotten smiles—forgotten looks,
Thick as dead leaves on autumn brooks;
And all is joyless; though they were
The brightest things life's spring could share,
O! would to God, I ne'er had heard
That light uttered, careless word!

It was the first, the only one,
Of those, which lips for ever gone
Breathed in their love—which had for me
Rebuke of harshness at my glee;
And if those lips were here to say
"Beloved, let it pass away."
Ah! then, perchance—but I have heard
That last dear tone, the careless word!

O! ye who, meeting, sigh to part,
Whose words are treasures to some heart,
Deal gently, ere the dark day come,
When earth hath but for one a home;
Lest, musing o'er the past, like me,
They feel their hearts wrung bitterly,
And, heeding not what else they heard,
Dwell weeping on a careless word!

Miscellaneous Selections.

I WAS ONCE YOUNG.—It is an excellent thing for all who are engaged in giving instruction to young people frequently to call to mind what they were themselves when young. This practice is one of the most likely to impart prudence and forbearance and to correct unreasonable expectations. At one period of my life, when instructing two or three young people to write, I found them, as I thought, unusually stupid. I have owned about this time to look over the contents of an old copy-book, written by me when I was a boy. The thick strokes the crooked down strokes, the awkward joinings of the letters, and the blots in two or three made me completely ashamed of myself, and I could, at the moment have buried the book in the fire. The worse, however, I thought of myself, the better I thought of my learned scholars; I was sure of my reasonable expectations, and became in future daily more patient and forbearing. In teaching youth, remember that you once were young, and in reproving their youthful errors endeavour to call to mind your own.

TO WIVES.—The first inquiry of a woman after marriage should be, "How shall I continue the love I have inspired? How shall I preserve the heart I have won?"

1. Bid adieu to make your husband's habitation alluring and delightful to him. Let it be to him a sanctuary to which his heart may always turn from the calamities of life. Make it a refuge from his cares, a shelter from the world, a home not for his person only, but for his heart. He may meet with pleasures in other houses, but let him find pleasure in his own. Should he be dejected, soothe him; should he be silent and thoughtful, do not be dissatisfied with him; should he be studious, favour him with all practicable facilities; or should he be peevish, make allowance for human nature and by your sweetness gentleness, and good humour urge him continually to think, though he may not say it, "This woman is indeed a comfort to me; I certainly but love her, and requite such gentleness and affection as they deserve."

2. Invariably adorn yourself with delicacy and modesty. These, to a man of refinement, are attractions the most highly captivating, while their opposites never fail to inspire disgust. Let the delicacy and modesty of the bride be always in a great degree supported by the wife.

3. If it be possible, let your husband suppose you think him a good Indian; and it will be a strong stimulus to his being so. As long as he thinks he possesses the reputation, he will take some pains to deserve it; but when once lost the name, he will be apt to abandon the reality.

4. Cultivate and exhibit with the greatest care and constancy cheerfulness and good humour.—They give a beauty to the finest face; and impart charms where charms are not. On the contrary, a gloomy dissatisfied manner is chilling and repulsive to his feelings; he will be very apt to seek elsewhere for ease smiles and that cheerfulness which he finds not in his own house.

5. In the article of dress study your husband's taste. The opinion of others on this subject is but of very little consequence, if he approves.

Particularly shun what the word calls, in ridicule, 'curtain lectures.' When you shut your door at night endeavor to shut out at the same moment all discord and contention, and look upon your chamber as a retreat from the vexations of the world.

How indecorous, offensive and sinful it is, for a woman to exercise authority over her husband, and to say, 'I will not have it so. It shall be as I like!' But I trust the number of those who adopt this unbecoming and disgraceful manner, is so small as to render it unnecessary for me to enlarge on the subject.

7. Be careful never to join in a jest and laugh against your husband. Conceal his faults and speak only of his merits. Shun every approach to extravagance. The want of economy has involved millions in misery. Be neat, tidy orderly, methodical. Rise early, breakfast early, have a place for everything, and everything in its place.

8. Few things please a man more than seeing his wife notable and clever in the management of her household. A knowledge of cookery, as well as every other branch in housekeeping, is indispensable in a female, and a wife should always endeavor to support with applause the character of the lady and the housewife.

9. Let home be your empire—your world Let it be the scene of your wishes, your thoughts your plans, your exertions. Let it be the stage on which in the varied character of wife of mother, and of mistress, you strive to shine. In its sober, quiet scenes let your heart cast its anchor, let your feelings and pursuits all be centred. Leave to your husband the task of distinguishing himself by his valour or his talents. Do you seek for fame at home, let your applause be that of servants, your children, your God.—If he, on the other hand, does not appreciate these thing, he must be a black guard.

"John, can you tell me the difference between attraction of gravitation and the attraction of cohesion?" Yes, sir; attraction of gravitation pulls a drunken man to the ground, and the attraction of cohesion prevent's his getting up again."

An old, rough clergyman once took for his text that passage of the Psalms, 'I said in my haste all men are liars.' Looking up apparently as if he saw the Psalms standing immediately before him, he said:—'You said in your haste, David, did you? Well, if you had been here, you might have said it after mature reflection.
