Russian Minister, marks the last act in the rupture between the United States and Russia, and signalizes the end of the absurdly extravagant and inconsistent professions of good feeling which have en exchanged between the authorities of the two countries for many years past The origin of the Catacazy difficulty is well known. The Minister was instruct the settlement of the Alabama claims, so that Russia might continue to benefit politically by the estrangement between Great Britain and the United States -He did this in two ways, first by trying to prevent the appointment of General Schenck as Minister of England, because he was known to be favorable to a settle ment, and thereby intriguing against the labors of the Joint High Commission For this interference with American affairs the President demanded the re call of M. Catacazy, to which the Rusian Foreign Minister, Prince Gortschakoff, consented, but who has in the opinion of Americans grossly insulted the nation by professing to hold M. Catacazy innocent of any impropriety and refusing to censure him until he has heard him wn story face to face at St. Petersburg This answer has produced much irritation in the United States, where it is fel that the apology is incomplete, and so there is an end to the era of good feeling with Russia. The origin, nature and end of this difficulty furnish a subject of congratulation to the British people, who are now freshly indebted to the American government for its proof of friend There should be, and indeed there is, broader grounds for fellowship and good will between the Americans and the English than between the Americans and the Russians, and it is to be hoped that the era of friendly feeling now inaugurated by the settlement of question of difference between the two nations will long continue, and the friendship b made all the stronger by this rupture with Russia.

It is now apparent that the municipal affairs of New York have been managed for years past in an atmosphere of fraud. Perhaps no more astounding instance of official depravity has been revealed in the present generation than that which is now coming to light in New York in House under the impression that from the manner in which the hon. member for Cornwall had conducted his Govern-ment in Quebec, that principles of the connection with that event; and the supporters of that government were too much tied up to their party to give an honest, conscientious vote.

Mr. Blake, we think, deserves credit for bringing up the question even at this late day. It was supposed by many that he would be obliged to succumb to the exigencies of his new relations and the support of the support at the frauds of the Tammany municipal government. The Grand Jury, after investigating the charge, has found that the frauds committed upon the city exceed fifty millions of dollars, and that besides those who are already accused, there are some forty or fifty persons who are guilty of participation in these gigantic frauds. It would seem that all the officials from the ticket to the lowest have been actuated. the exigencies of his new relations and to retreat from his position on this question; but his manly introduction of the motion shows that he has not abandoned his professions on this subject, and his Cabinet and the House of representatives have acted with him like a unit upon it.
