A Broken Wedding Ring

By Bertha M. Clay

And Hettie, whose loving heart was almost broken, fell upon her knees, hiding her face in her hands, and sobbing with bitter tears and cries. She dared not raise her head to take a last look at the face she loved so well.

The general drew Leah near to the door.

"Good-bye, father," she said. "I am not cold, much less, or homeless; but I could not lead the life you selected for me. I would rather have died. I will come back if you want me or send for me."

She moved towards him, as a thought she would kiss his hands or his face; but he turned from her with a gesture of angry contempt.

"Good-bye, Hettie," she said, in a broken voice. "Nothing can part us for long; nothing can change our affection for each other; time, patience, and love will bring us together again. If you want me, send, and I will come."

It was a pitiful scene—one girl kneeling in wild distress on the ground, the other pale, trembling, half hesitating moving slowly to the door.

Suddenly Leah threw up her arms with a bitter cry.

"It is worse than death!" she said. "O uncle! help me!"

"I will do all I can to make you happy, Leah," he replied.

He did not know how to comfort her. It was he who, in seeking to rescue her from a life she hated, had brought these troubles upon her. Nature was more kind; for when Sir Arthur beckoned his man servant to help him, Leah had lost all consciousness, and so left her father's house, almost as he had said in the stillness of death.

Chapter VIII.

"She is gone," said Martin Ray, hoarsely, as the sound of the carriage-wheels reached them. "She is gone, Hettie, from our home and life forever. She is dead to us."

And the man whose ends and aims in life were all selfish, who would have trampled over hundreds of human beings to attain the object he sought, buried his face in his hands, and sobbed aloud.

The sobs aroused Hettie, who in

"I SUFFERED SEVEN YEARS"

Was Eventually Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I suffered for seven long years with a lame back, irregularities and pain. I had one physician after another but they did me no good. I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and gave it a trial and in a short time I felt benefited and am now feeling fine, and without weakness or pain. Many of my friends have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and been helped by it."

her whole life never remembered to have seen her father weep—started her into forgetting her own grief, for a time, to console him. She went to him, and knelt down by his side.

"I will love you doubly, dearest," she said, "to make up for it. I will be two daughters to you."

He stood up, gray, worn, and haggard, a prematurely old man. "You are the best of daughters, Hettie," he said, slowly; "but she—well, you see, she was more than a daughter to me. I wanted to live again in her. You are all that is sweet, kind, and gentle; but she had fire and passion, she had power and eloquence, she would have been a light in the darkness. I shall never be the same man again, Hettie. I did not know that I could be so human. I did not know that I was capable of valuing so highly the love of a slip of a girl. I think better of myself for my own grief, Hettie."

She whispered to him, after the manner of loving daughters, that he was perfect, that no man could be better; and unconsciously the gentle flattery soothed him.

"How strange," said Hettie, "for all this to occur in one day! This morning how little we knew of what was about to happen! This morning I hardly remembered that mamma had a brother. She talked to us about him sometimes, but I had nearly forgotten him. Now—"

"Ah, now," sighed Martin Ray, spreading out his hands in speechless distress—"now all is changed!"

Hettie looked up at him with wistful eyes.

"Father," she asked, gently, "was my mother really an aristocrat?"

"Good Heaven no, Hettie! Certainly not. She was a lady; she came from a very ancient and honorable family."

"That is something to be proud of, is it not?" she asked, innocently.

And Martin Ray glared at her with angry eyes. He could not say "No," and he would not say "Yes." It seemed to him that these children of his, so long docile and blind in their belief, were suddenly rising up against him.

"Why do you hate my mother's brother, father? Why could you not be friends with him?" she persisted. "It would have been so pleasant to have an uncle. Why could you not be friends?"

"Why were not Napoleon and Wellington friends?" he asked pompously. "Why are the hare and the hounds, the dove and the hawk, not friends? We are enemies naturally, as they are."

"It seems so strange," said the girl, who was still a child. "How angry his face was, and how stern his voice! He thought you had
