gentlemen who have driven their equipage to the stable and left these grooms of the docks to clean up ready for the next excursion.

Yo get some idea of London's trade by You get some idea of London's trade by Moving through the tall warehouses of the docks. Consider a few figures. Thirty-six thousand tons of tea are stored here in a single year. In the vaults, with their twenty-eight miles of gangway, can be stored one hundred thousand pipes of wine. Two hundred and fifty thousand tons of wool, worth £20,000,000, arrive annually at the port of London. Twenty thousand tons of tobacco are here in bond, valued at £9,000,000. There is accommodation in the cold storage warehouses for 84,000 sheep. Sixty thousand pounds of ostrich feathers have been stored here at one time, and several millions of bird skins arrive annually, too numerous for computation. In addition, the London docks have accommodation for sugar, ivory, spices, bark, gums, metals, marble, drugh, dates, pepper, rice, coffee, cocoa, isinglass, coal, grain, furniture, wood, timber, carpets, butter, chese, poultry, even for sea-shells sponges, musk, ambergris and beeswax! In a single room you may look at the elephants' tusks worth nearly £100,000.

The gardens and the factories of the world empty themselves into this lap of London. There is hardly a little island set in the midst of the sees which does not grow something or make something with brown fingers to send into the cold, gray port of London. As you walk through the warehouses your nostrils are filled with the scents of the earth—cinamon, nutmeg, musk, vanilla, coffee, tea, tobacco—everything that one lived and drank the air in green and beautiful gardens across the seas. There at your feet lies the matting torn from tea packages on which some Chinaman set strange marks with brush and ink; and there are the red-and-green cases themselves, with the number and weight cut in their sides by a scribing iron. You look at even the nalls in some estrange package of goods out of the east, and picture to

On the contrary, most of them seem to come from districts where foreign money would not be likely to penetrate, yet somehow the visitors pick it up and pass it off on unsuspecting who, in their turn, try still air at

The Best Woman's Club.

"I am persuaded that without exaggeration of statement we may assume that there are women's clubs whose obects and intents are not only harmful, wifehood and motherhood; that there are others harmless in intent, but whose tendency is toward waste of time and perversion of effort, as well as to the formation of the club habit, and the toleration or active patronage of less it nocent organizations; that there are also associations of women whose purposes of charity, religious enterprise or intellec-tual improvement are altogether laudable and worthy. Leave this latter class out of account, and treating the subject on the theory that only the other organizamentioned are under consideration I believe that it should be boldly delared that the best and safest club for a woman to patronize is her home.' Grover Cleveland.

-Sawdust and Milk.

Collier's for April 29th quotes a profes sor at the Tuskegee Agricultural Experimental Station as saying: "I have here seven samples of bran. To most of you they book affile. The price paid for the was probably about $22 a ton, and ye one sample is nearly half sawdust, you want sawdust with your bran w can give it to you at much less than $22 a ton. You wonder why your cattle are not satisfied with the food, why they fail to yield the milk and butter which you have a right to expect. Here is a large preportion of ground corn-cob. As corncob and sawdust happen to be less nourishing than bran to an ordinary cow, this device for making pro fit may turn the scale against a farmer just enough to deprive him of his living. Some people object to the crusade now some as the originals whose understudies they become. If so, nothing is perpe-trated worse than fraud. Often, how-ever, sawdust is fed to cattle, women, or men, proving unconsocial. Again, these ever, sawdust is fed to cattle, women, or men, proving uncongenial. Again, these adulteration gives them indigestion, talies away their appetites, and has a bad effect on business. A bad effect on certain lines of business is what is wanted. The injury to appetite and peace of mind is a condition precedent to improvement. When we worry enough to introduce the apparently rare feature known as common honesty into the business of selling food, we can go back to tranquil meals; and for most stomachs it will probably be better, in the end, to be peaceful over food than peaceend, to be peaceful over food than peaceful over poison."

Invisible Eyeglasses.

Invisible eye-glasses, sometimes use by actors, are not so numerous as the idea would suggest, according to a the atrical man, and then can only be had to order and in certain shops. Richard Mansfield is credited with having in-Mansfield is credited with having invented them, or at least of having first worn them, for roles in which eye-glasses would make the impersonator of the character look ridiculous. As a matter of fact an actor's eyes have to be very far gone to prevent him from going through his work without glasses. Invisible classes are simply very small and visible glasses are simply very small and made to fit in as close to the eye as possible. The eye-lashes touch them so constantly as to make them require cleaning after every act. The nose piece and clamps which hold them on are also as small as possible, and sometimes flesh-colored. Even at that they are not really invisible, because when the light strikes them at a certain angle they are sure to give off a reflection which reveals them.

The Handy Man.

Yet, waning as the honorable profession undoubtedly is, one cannot believe that it will be allowed to perish. The Jack-of-all-trades is by far too useful a person to follow the five-toed horse and the flying lizard. Something is to be hoped from the gradual infusion of common sense into unionism. In the long run, it will be seen that to leave the workman only one string to his bow is to place him equally under the ty-ranny of his employer and his walking delegate. And even if labor should be slow to perceive the advantage of ver-satility the increasing demand for the handy man is likely to replenish the supply. Never was the need greater. Large office and business buildings, apartment houses and spacious residences all require men who can promptly turn their hands to all sorts of repairs and such men will receive pay as high as the union scale with far steadier em ployment. While the handy man is in hausted by the expense and delay of abeyance, it is probable that he is fomenting a rather formidable competition from the downtrodden householder. Ex-consulting several artisans about every small job, he replaces instead of re pairing, whenever practicable, and for the irreducible minimum becomes, per-

The spider has a tremendous appetite and his gormandizing defies all human competition. A scientist who carefully noted a spider's consumption of food in twenty-four hours, concluded that if the spider were built proportionately to the human scale he would eat at daybreak (approxmiately) a small alliga-tor, by 5 a.m., a lamb, by nine a.m., a young camelopard, by one o'clock a sheep and would finish up with a lark pie in which there were 120 birds.
