Editor's Talk

N this week's cover picture you will recognise a remarkably delicate piece of work by W. Smithson Broadhead, the young English artist of whom we spoke a little while ago. A test of the fidelity with which that subject is drawn: When it came into the office two people remarked on its beauty, and each wanted to know who was the lady that did it ? That's on the assumption that a woman knows how to paint a woman better than a man does; probably a foolish notion. Mr. Broadhead has some good masculine things all ready for running in the Canadian Courier; a series of story illustrations which in most respects-well, wait till you see them in our first serial of three instalments beginning soon.

O UR interesting friend Whitaker is back again this week. One subscriber took objection to our other two stories.of Whitaker's; saying they were too much-just forget his exact words; but we noticed that he had read the stories through to find out. He will no doubt read this one also.

HIS congress of Catholics in Montreal and Quebec is causing us considerable trouble; but we don't mind that, so long as you get the benefit in seeing the greatest ecclesiastical convention ever held in America without paying railway fares.

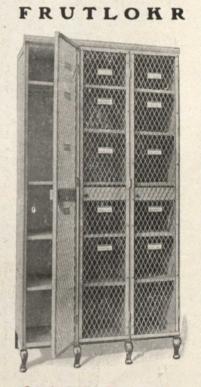

N this week we've got a couple of musical features that should be interesting to everybody. One is a descriptive interview with our English friend, Bandmaster Williams, at the Fair ; the other an interesting illustrated chat with the Hambourgs, just arrived in Canada; father and brother of the celebrated Mark.

HIS week probably sees the last of "All Things Considered," by Peter McArthur, who is now running a new magazine of his own; which the Canadian Courier intend to read regularly with much pleasure and considerable profit to-ourselves.
