

wishes to converse at the R.U. He would no doubt receive the answers to his questions were we to offer them. We could talk of the close comradeship of your friends within a Regt — so very intense in his parent unit; of Regt. pride — almost non-existent in a C.R.U.; of rough handling, of being and feeling his a number instead of a man in the unending re-formation stream.

I feel very strongly, Sir, that we cannot allow ourselves to be blinded to the psychological "smack in the face" that a man receives when entering an R.U.
 There are those who can stand up to it; there are many who cannot.
