

CONTENTS.

V

CHAPTER X.

	PAGE
INFECTION AND CONTAGION: Brief Review of Theories and Facts regarding their Propagation—Brief Descriptions of the various Infectious Diseases—Their respective Avenues of Propagation—Periods of Incubation—Duration of Contagiousness—Measures to be taken: Isolation; Preventive Precautions; Quarantine; Sanitary Cordons—Saving of Life and Property—Duties of School Trustees and Teachers and other persons—Notification and Disinfection—List of Disinfectants and their Use—Legislation and Regulations regarding Infectious Diseases	118

CHAPTER XI.

CLOTHING: Sanitary Hints as to Material—Shape—Poisonous Coloring Matters—Even Distribution of Clothing—Tight-Lacing—Children Sitting in Damp Clothes—Weight of Wearing Apparel and of Bed-Clothing, especially for Young Children—Head-Covering—Shape of Shoes—Deformities of Feet—Infant Clothing.....	137
---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER XII.

BATHING: Structure and Physiology of the Skin—Adjuvant to the Lungs and Kidneys—Influences of Changes of Temperature—Importance of Proper Conditions as to Temperature—Proper Times for Bathing—The Hot Bath—The Cold Bath—Sulphur Baths—Importance of Helping the Pores of the Skin to act properly	144
------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER XIII.

FOODS: Offices of—Proximate Principles—Divisions based on these—Purposes served by Foods of each class—A Mixed Diet necessary—Dietaries for Varying Conditions—Table of Percentage of Compositions of various Articles of Food—Remarks on Farinaceous and Leguminous Foods—Milk—Preparation of Food—Cooking for Conditions of Health and Sickness—Adulterations and Impurities—Their Results—Their Detection	154
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER XIV.

DIGESTION: Hunger and Thirst—Saliva—Its Uses—The Teeth—Their Structure—Care of the Teeth—Ages at which they appear—Regularity of Meals—Results of Hurry—Effects of Cheerful Conversation—Hints as to Mastication—Mechanism of Swallowing—Description of the Structure and Physiological Action of the other Organs of Digestion—Practical Deductions	169
------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----

CHAPTER XV.

ALCOHOL; Not Needed as a Food—Experiments showing the Fallacy of the Supposition that it maintains a high degree of Animal Heat—Effects of Alcohol on the Tissues—Alexis St. Martin—Results of Alcoholism—Formation of the Habit—Results—Statistics of Alcoholism—Should Teachers be Abstainers?—Tobacco—Indiscriminate Use of Narcotics..	180
--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------	-----