A Traveller's Wonder.

"This," observed Wu, as he lifted a box-like affair from his trunk, "is one of the greatest wonders of America."

"It doesn't look very wonderful," commented Tsi Ann, tucking one foot up where she could sit on it and the throne at the same time.

"No, but even in America no one can understand it," Tsi Ann.

"Don't put that thing to my ear," cautioned Tsi Ann. "Is this another of those telephones?"

"O, no. This is worse than the telephone. It is a gas meter."

"A gas meter? What does it do?" "The consumer."

"How does it work?" "That is a mystery. It is only known that it works always and untiringly. It works while you sleep and while you wake. It never stops. It is constructed after the Newtonian theory of creation. It has something in it that just keeps it whirling on and on, at so much per revolution, and nobody knows what keeps it moving, and nobody can stop it."

"That's funny."

"Funny, yes. But very sad in America. Listen to it. Hear it running right above the Coniacs and the 900 gods of the Pale Green Mountains! The gas company never will get the chance to read what this meter has recorded."

"But," said the Empress, "is there no escape from this in America?"

"None."

"It must be worse than manifest destiny."

"Wu," remarked Tsi Ann, with that intelligent smile which has enshrined her in the hearts of curious collectors. "Wu, I am glad you were sent to America. At one time I almost had decided to become civilized."

"So had I," acknowledged Wu, "but the bite of the dog, as the foreign devils put it, will cure the hair."—Chicago Tribune.

A Queen's Thoughts on Love.

The Queen of Roumania's latest literary production is entitled "Whispered Words." The theme she touches on is love and marriage, and here are a few of her reflections:

The moment the thought of patience flits through the mind in marriage, the marriage has, strictly speaking, ceased to exist, because love has vanished, on which alone this relationship can be built up and preserved.

For that which we fully fathom stands not in need of patience; it comes to us as a thing of course, natural, simple and clear.

Unto love every little foible and peculiarity is dear. Every sacrifice is welcome to love, which never feels it as such.

In presence of the world no doubt it is proper that forbearance should be exercised, and it is meet that the eyes of outsiders should not catch a glimpse of the misery of an unhappy union.

Marriage has but one sole end, to bring children into the world, and to shield them until they can protect themselves.

If we could bring ourselves to look upon marriage as a holy sacrifice, an act of perfect self-abnegation, we should make much greater progress.

In marriage people fancy they can throw off all restraint, heedless of the fact that when they act thus their shortcomings assume colossal dimensions, and their good qualities dwindle to nothingness.

In marriage, more than in any other form of relationship, one should never throw the reins aside, but always keep a firm hand upon one's will.

An unreasonable yawn is sometimes enough to produce a whole drama.

She Had an Aim in Life.

"Penelope, have you any plans for the future?"

The father, a distinguished physician, looked sternly at his daughter. "You are only a girl," he said, "and you are only a more or less imperfect embodiment of our ideas."

Only a Day Between.

Monday.

Mrs. Rowley was carrying a trayful of table-glasses up the stairs—caught her foot in her dress, dropped and smashed the lot. Her husband ran out, and he helped to gather up the fragments.

"Never mind! Don't worry! It couldn't be helped!" said the man, who had to pay for a replenishment of tumblers, and compotes, and celery-holders, and jam-dishes.

Wednesday.

Mr. Rowley slipped down, and broke an ordinary—and old—breakfast-cup.

"You clumsy brute! Why can't you be more careful! It would have been all the same if it had been one of my best sets!" And so on for half an hour—from the woman who earnestly not only had to spend, the coffee—"Ally Roger."

Mrs. Tupman, a prominent lady of Richmond, Va., a great sufferer with woman's troubles, tells how she was cured.

"For some years I suffered with backache, severe bearing-down pains, leucorrhoea, and falling of the womb. I tried many remedies, but nothing gave any positive relief."

"I commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in June, 1901. When I had taken the first half bottle, I felt a vast improvement, and have now taken ten bottles with the result that I feel like a new woman. When I commenced taking the Vegetable Compound I felt all right and was fast approaching complete nervous collapse. I weighed only 98 pounds. Now I weigh 109 1/2 pounds and am improving every day. I gladly testify to the benefits received."

"Mrs. R. C. TUPMAN, 423 West 30th St., Richmond, Va.—$5000 forfeit if original of above letter proving genuineness cannot be produced."

When a medicine has been successful in more than a million cases, is it justice to yourself to say, without trying it, "I do not believe it would help me?" Surely you cannot wish to remain weak and sick.

Mrs. Pinkham, whose address is Lynn, Mass., will answer cheerfully and without cost all letters addressed to her by sick women. Perhaps she has just the knowledge that will help your case—try her to-day—it costs nothing.

Some people are so anxious to keep their left hand in ignorance of the deeds of their right that they keep it in perpetual idleness.

A WORD TO WOMEN.

Any sick woman is invited to consult by letter with Dr. R. V. Pierce, chief consulting physician of the Invalid's Hotel and Surgical Institute, Buffalo, N. Y. In an active practice of more than thirty years, assisted by a staff of nearly a score of associate physicians, Dr. Pierce has treated and cured over half a million women.

All diseases peculiar to women are treated with success. This consultation by letter is absolutely free. Every letter is treated as strictly confidential and answered promptly, giving the best of medical advice. All answers are sent in plain envelopes bearing on them no printing of any kind. Write without fear and without fee to Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A word of kindness is seldom spoken in vain, while witty sayings are as easily lost as the pearls slipping from a broken string.

—Salt rheum, or eczema, with its itching and burning, is cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla. So are all other blood diseases.

We have only to change our ideas to change our friends. Our friends are only a more or less imperfect embodiment of our ideas.

Mainly About People.

Sir Richard Powell, the eminent English physician, is noted for his frankness in speaking his mind without regard to the social position of his patient. Once, when he was called to prescribe for the Duchess of Manchester, he ordered her to disrobe. "But, Sir Richard, I haven't my maid here," she said; to which the baronet retorted: "Madame, I have no intention of examining your maid."

Dean Fuentes of the College of Civil Engineering at Cornell, who died recently, was frequently gruff, though he had the kindest of hearts. A recent graduate tells of going to the office of "The Mogie," as everyone called him, to see whether he had been successful in an astronomy examination. "The Mogie" knew what he wanted, and the student was greeted as follows: "Blank, I passed you. God forgive me!"

Mrs. Langtry was discussing the other day the recent marriage of the octogenarian Marquis of Donegal with a young Canadian girl. She said it reminded her of an incident in the life of her father. Her father was a clergyman, and there came to him to be married one day a man of seventy and a girl of eighteen. The minister whispered, when this ill-assorted couple came and stood before him: "The font is at the other end of the church." "What do we want with the font? We are here to be married," said the old man. "Oh, I beg your pardon," the clergyman rejoined; "I thought you had brought this young girl here to be christened."

A newly-married couple recently sauntered leisurely around Statuary Hall in the Capitol at Washington, D.C., trying hard to appear unconscious. Stopping on one of the echo stones to gaze at a new statue, they were spied by two youthful pages looking for a joke. One of the pages hurried to another echo stone, and in a whisper asked: "When did you get married?" The couple looked at each other, and then at around the hall, but could discern no one. The bride blushed, and the young man looked miserable. Presently again came the mysterious question: "When did you get married?" Awe-stricken and looking extremely foolish, they fled from the hall, to the intense amusement of the mischievous pages.

Talking of the late Augustin Daly, Miss May Irwin, the well-known Canadian actress, says: "One of the funniest things to me was to have the gov'nor say, 'Well, I'll show you,' and then come up and do the act. I never could resist saying, 'couldn't do it like that if I died for it.' And I couldn't. When we were rehearsing 'Red Letter Night,' I was playing a prying servant, always eavesdropping. I had to get caught and fall into the room when the door was opened suddenly. I had to fall on my hands and knees. 'Well, the gov'nor showed me how. I nearly died. I couldn't do it like that,' I laughed, 'there's not enough of me lengthwise.' 'Well, well, May,' was the reply, 'you can make it up breadthwise.'"

Senator Hoar of Massachusetts relates this anecdote of his friend, the Rev. Joseph Erskine of Edinburgh: "At one time in his life, Mr. Erskine lost handkerchief after handkerchief. He found, on investigation, that it was on Sunday these losses occurred, and, accordingly, one Sabbath morning Mrs. Erskine sewed his handkerchief in the tail pocket of his coat. 'No,' said she, 'no let us see what will happen.' Mr. Erskine, with the sewed handkerchief, passed down the aisle of the church that morning as usual to ascend to the pulpit, but as he smiled by the amen corner he felt a gentle tug behind, a delicate nibble among his coat-tails. Thereupon he turned on the disappointed old woman in the corner, and said, with a triumphant smile: 'No! the day, honest woman, no! the day!'"

A number of years ago suit, says the "Green Bag," was brought against the cashier of the State Bank of Iowa Falls, to recover an alleged deposit, which deposit the bank denied. During the trial the defendant's attorney made a very convincing argument for his client, and took pains to tell the jury of his client's high social and religious standing, and of the confidence of the people which he enjoyed, and endeavored to impress upon the minds of the jury that the defendant was not the kind of a man to make a mistake in the handling of other people's money. Tom H. Milner, then, as now, a witty as well as a very shrewd lawyer, represented the other side, and in addressing the jury said: "Gentlemen, I heartily concur in what my brother has said of the defendant; I agree with him in each and every statement that he has made pertaining to Mr. —'s good self; but I would have you consider deeply this one fact—Canada is full of just such men."

Wolf von Schierbrand tells an amusing story of his last weeks in Berlin. He was for a long time chief correspondent of the Associated Press, and was at last ordered to leave the country for having given too intimate information about the Kaiser. The American ambassador secured a respite of two weeks for him, during which he could wind up his affairs, but he was a marked man, and the police shadowed him night and day. At last he hit upon the expedient of placing a stuffed dummy of himself on the front porch, with its back toward the street, and while the police zealously watched the dummy he was daily slipping out by a side door and going unobserved about his business, disguised in a pair of blue goggles and an old slouch hat. The manikin sat in the chair, with occasional interruptions, from nine in the morning till ten at night, and was pulled inside by a string at bedtime. On the morning of Mr. Schierbrand's departure for the United States, it was turned with its wooden face toward the street, displaying a small placard for the edification of the police, reading: "Thanks; I'm off."
