generally known to his subjects, a wager of large amount was laid by a errain Mr. Von Holster. who had been a gentlematn of the bedchamber to his late Highness, that he wonld succeed in passing himelf off upon the whole town and cororation , Maving a clerk in the honse of W-& Co., he departed on hi- errand, attended elerk in the house of -& Co., he departed on his errand, attended oy an agent for the partics who had betted largely asainst him. This adjudged to Von IIolster as brilliantly wous. Thus far all was well: what follows, however, is still better. Some time ago, a young laly of large fortune, and still larger expectations, on a visit to the capital, had met with Mr . Yon H ., and had clandeatinely formed an aequaintanee met with Mr. Von H., and had clandestinely formed ant aeytaintanec which had ripened into a strong - entune, or none which corresponded to the expectations of the lady's formily. Vnder this circomstances, the lady (despairing in any other way of ohtaining her father's consent) agreed, that in connection with his cheme for winning the wascr, Fitz-Hum shonld attempt another, more interesting to them hoth; in pursuatce of which agrramgetwout he conMr. Commissioner P-, the father of his mistress: and the result is that he has actually married her with the entire appmbation of her friends he has actually married her with the entire approbation of her friends.
Whether the sequel of the affair will eorrespond with its sucess hitheron, remains however to be seen. Certain it is, that for the present, until the prince's pleasure can be taken, Mr. Von Holster has leen committed o prison under the new law for abolishing hets of a certain description, ant also for having presumed to personate the sovercign." Thas for the newsarer. However, in at few davs, all clouds hangeng ver the prospects of the young couplecteared aways, Mr. Von Holster, in a dutiful petition to the prinee, declared that he had nut presonate his Sorene Highness. On the contrary, he hadgiven himselt out noth before and after his entry intothe town P- for no more than the Count Fitzand after his entry intothe town P- for no more than the Count Fitz-Hum: and it was they, the good people of that town, who had insistel on Hum ; and it was they, the good poople of that town, whohad insister on mitaking him from a prince: if they rondd hiss his hand, was it for a mumble individual of no pretension whaterer arrogantly to refuse? If humble imdividual of no pretension whaterer arroganyl inconsiderahle person like himself rudely to refluse their homame, when the areatest kings (ns like himself rudely to refuse their homage, when the greatest kings (as On further inquiry, the whole circumstances were detailed to the prince, and amused him greatly ; bnt when the narrator came to the final article of the "rebellion" (under which sounding title a friend of Von Holster's had communicated to him a general combination amongst his creditors for arresting his person), the good-natured prince laughed immoderately, and it became easy to see that no very severe punishment would follow. In fact, by his services to the late priace, Von H., had established some claims upon he grattude of this, at acknowtedgment which the prince from such a quarter, together with some other marks or fivor win H ., could not fail to pacify the rebels against which he lad alrendy His seruples had orivinally been sanguished in the wineapprore. and there alos it was that upon learnine the total suppression of the insurrection, he drowned all his scruples for a second and is final time. The town of M -has, however, still occasion to remember the bue landau, and the superd whiskers, from the jokes B-in particulat, the then called on to parry upon that snlject. Dr. B-, in particulaw, the physician of that town, having originally offered five humerci dollars to physicans, has been obliged solemnly to advertise in the gazefte, for the information of the wits in the capital, "That he will not consider himself bound by his promise, secing that every week he receives so many private notiffeations of that appointment, that it would beggar him to pay for mers they all maintain, that thonet Fitz-Hum may have leen a spurious prinee, jet undoubtedly the man ris-Hom may so political discernment that he well deserved to ad so much sense and political discernment that he well descrved to have heen a truc one
