LIFE AND MONEY

and our attitude toward them—in the present and for the future—are subjects for careful thought. The wise expenditure of one's income—the judicious investment of a part of it as a provision for the declining years of life—require the exercise of the best judgment.

As a means for providing for this period of life—and at the same time of protecting dependents from possible want—there is nothing which will so surely serve this purpose as a policy of endowment insurance—in a strong Canadian Company such as the Policies issued on the non-participating system—at rates as low as consistent with safety; a definite contract to pay—with no uncertainty.
