Another professor is in favor of the X-ray and other methods of treatment, and still another often uses a mirror with a score of lancet blades in it. This is applied to the reddened surface to make a series of small punctures. When they heal a pale skin remains where the vermillion once was.

Answers to Health Questions

T. S.—Is there a simple cream that can be rubbed upon the hands?

A hand unguent of value is this one: Glycerin water, 1 ounce; Oil of sweet almonds, 1 ounce; Oil of olive, 1 ounce; Borax, 1/2 ounce; Water, 1/2 pint. Beat the cocoa butter and oil of almonds in a double boiler and when thoroughly blended add the zinc and borax; stir as it cools, and add the oil of bergamot last. Rub into the hands at night.

B. H.—I am very clumsy and awkward. How can I improve myself?

Learn to dance and snowshoe. Then practice this carriage. When you walk, the chin and abdomen should be held in and the chest should be held out. The legs should swing from the hips and not bend mainly from the knees. The trunk should sway very little. The arms, while they must not be thrown forward and backward in an ungainly manner, must not be held rigidly at the side. Many women do not walk correctly because they do not wear proper shoes.

Dr. Hirschberg will answer questions for readers of this paper in medical, hygienic and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. He will not undertake to prescribe or offer advice for individual cases. Where the subject is not of general interest letters will be answered personally if a stamped and addressed envelope is enclosed. Address all inquiries to Dr. L. K. Hirschberg, care of this office.

enough for almost anybody, and in this manner Mrs. Housewife will be able to change her menu every day of the week. This in itself is an innovation to the husband to come home and enjoy his meals.

Do not forget that the table is one of the great pleasures of life. I regret to say that this sort of housewife is not common, especially in big towns. There the young marriageable woman forgets that she should know a few notions of cookery. To my mind many a young girl should spend her spare moments to conquer this art, pleasing her husband through the palate besides being able to run her home on economic plans.

the wrong he had done me. I wouldn't let myself even think of you, and then—I realized that I had spoiled your life."

"No, not spoiled it, Mary! Blessed it! We must prove that yet."

"Yes, spoiled it!" the wife went on passionately. "If I had understood, if I could have dreamed that I could ever care—Oh, Dick, I would never have married you for anything in the world!"

"But now you do realize," the young man said quietly. "The thing is done. If we made a mistake it is for us to bring happiness out of that error."

"Oh, can't you see?" came the stricken lament. "I'm a jailbird!"

"But you love me—you do love me, I know!" The young man spoke with joyous certainty, for some infection of her voice had told the truth to his heart. Nothing else mattered. "But now, to come back to this hole we're in here. Don't you understand at last that you can't beat the law? If you're caught here tonight where would you get out—caught here with a gang of burglars? Why didn't you go to Chicago, as you planned?"

"Planned? With whom?"

"Why, with Burke."

"Who told you that I had arranged any such thing?"

"Burke himself did."

"When?" Mary was standing rigid now, and the rare color flamed in her cheeks. Her eyes were blazing.

"Less than an hour ago."

"When?"

"In this room."

"What was he doing here?"

"Talking to my father."

"Joe, turn on that light! I want to see the face of every man in this room."

The blaze of the chandelier flamed brilliantly over all. Griggs moved stealthily a little nearer the door into the passage.

But Mary's next words came wholly as a surprise.

"Dick," she cried, "what are those tapestries worth?" She pointed toward the draperies that shrouded the great octagonal window.

"Oh, $200 or $300, I suppose," he answered. "Why?"

"Never mind that. How long have you had them, Dick?"

"Ever since I can remember."

"And they're not famous masterpieces which your father bought recently from some dealer who smuggled them into this country?"

"It's a trick! Burke's done it! Mary's word came with accusing vehemence."

There was another single step made by Griggs toward the door.

Mary's eye caught the movement, and her lips soundlessly formed the name:

"Griggs!"

The man strove to carry off the situation, though he knew well that he stood in mortal peril. He came a little toward the girl who had accused him of treachery.

"He's lying to you!" he cried forcibly, with a scornful gesture toward

STAGGERING BLOW TO THE LIBERALS

Effects of Report of Trans-continental Railway Commission.

OTTAWA, Feb. 16.—The Government has not yet considered any action, if such is possible, upon the report of the Transcontinental Railway Commission investigation. The report is now in the hands of the printer, and in a few days will be ready for general distribution. Doubtless it will be given the widest circulation as affording concrete and detailed examples of the waste and extravagance, as well as the numerous suspicious circumstances characterizing the whole undertaking.

The contracts were so wide open, so to speak, while as to what was done under or outside of them was always authorized by the commission vested with proper powers in the premises, that it may be impossible to do anything. The report, however, has emphasized and justified what has long been anticipated, and places the responsibility squarely where it belongs. An examination of the evidence or exhibits would fully justify the investigating commission, in the conclusions which it has reached.

The rumor has been current the past few days that realizing the effect upon the country the Liberal Senate may attempt to counter-blast enquiry of its own by way of attempting to neutralize the exposures of the commission's report. The futility of this is demonstrated when it is considered that the enquiry just concluded mainly out on the work itself where the conditions were seen first hand. No committee sitting at Ottawa could possibly attempt to cover a fraction of the investigation carried on so thoroughly by Messrs Gatusius and Staunton, nor could its conclusion be successfully rebutted. The apathy of the Opposition this year has been the wonderment of the country, but the grave scandal now brought to light is the most staggering blow ever dealt to a political party at any time in the history of Canada.

It is a complete and emphatic justification of the attitude of the Conservatives when in Opposition, but when, it will be recalled, they were indignantly instructed by the Blockers' Brigade of unsavory memory.

SHOULD LIMIT EXPENDITURE TO ESSENTIALS.

Sir Frederick Taylor, manager of the London branch of the Bank of Montreal, gives a comprehensive outline of the present monetary situation as viewed from the British standpoint. While in Montreal, Sir Frederick said:

"All borrowers throughout the world that depend on the London market for their financial requirements have of late found, and are now finding it not only wise, but imperative to restrict the size of their flotation to the smallest extent possible and also to limit their commitments to essential expenditures.

"Furthermore, owing to the money crisis, which, by the way, is still in progress, the terms to business borrowers have been on a steadily rising scale, and far more onerous than for many years past."

"These remarks apply to Canada with this addition, that the reputation accorded Canadian securities in London for several years past has vanished, and although our credit—I am speaking generally—continues good, and the Dominion as a whole will doubtless be able to continue to borrow in London, it will be with less ease, and consequently in smaller volume than in the past, besides which all offerings will be subject to careful scrutiny."

"It will, of course, be understood that my remarks do not in any way refer to the securities of the government of the Dominion of Canada, which are in a class by themselves.

"The British public have not lost confidence in Canada and Canadian institutions by a great deal," added Sir Frederick. "What I mean is that what might be termed the craze for Canada and Canadian investments is, let us say, in suspense."

Alorzo Dingman of St. Thomas, for many years postmaster at Southwold, dropped dead while reading a paper in his home.
