

SATCHEL OF THE SATELLITE.

LITTLE BITTER LOCAL AND FOREIGN, TRITE AND VERNACULAR, WISE AND OTHERWISE.

Every school house has its room for improvement.

Viljoen was once an editor. That's why the British cannot corner him.

It's queer that while the days are growing longer the hours are just as short.

Maple City residents will be glad to know that they are getting a snap, even if it is a cold one.

From the Hamilton Spectator 35 years ago Wednesday—"Large shipments of butter are made from Chatham to England."

A Chatham butcher has found a $20 gold piece in a slaughtered steer, which confirms us in our belief that there is money in live stock.—Comber Herald.

Few men are so skeptical as not to believe the good things they hear about themselves.—Montreal Star.

I guess that Star man isn't acquainted with musicians.

Has the Kent County Council a good roads committee? If they haven't, why haven't they and, if they have, what are they doing? Referred to Roads and Bridges.

James Ross, a former Chathamite, has invented a wireless telephone. Jim, if he wants to gain fame, will have to hurry up and get jilted by his best girl, or Marconi will beat him out.

C. L. VanGusen, of Blenheim, has been elected warden of Kent county.—London Free Press, Friday, Jan. 31, 1902.

Mr. VanGusen was elected warden of Kent County in January, 1901, a year ago. We thought it was about time the London Free Press was getting hold of it.

John A. Walker, K. C., says that there is only one thing wrong with the musical committee of the William street Baptist church. The committee is composed of Messrs. Judge Houston, Hugh Macaulay, G. F. Turill and Matthew Side. Mr. Walker says that Mr. Side shouldn't be on that committee. He does know a little about music.

"The killing of men under the name of war is the foulest blot upon humanity to-day," wrote Andrew Carnegie. We would like to know Mr. Carnegie's opinion on the killing of the Home-Steak strikers by his mercenaries. The workmen were agitating for a living wage and some of them were shot down in cold blood. Wasn't this "the foulest blot upon humanity?"

These Biddies and Siddies, etc., are bad medicine when it comes to breaking jail. It is evidently easier to imprison a scoundrel than to imprison some Chathamites.

About a thousand Hamilton people woke up the other morning to find their land was mortgaged to the Dominion government, and the Government was seeking to foreclose the mortgage. This has created such an uneasy feeling that the people can't sleep well at night now. The Hamilton Spectator says—"If King Edward particularly wants the lot that this great family journal's palatial residence is built on, he may come and take it away with him."

A CATASTROPHE. The dramatic editor of this G. H. J., is annihilated.

FAR WORSE. The man who thinks he knows it all is bad enough, but the woman who thinks he does, too, is worse.—The New York Press.

SHE MEANT VACCINATED. A little scholar in one of the city schools, wanted to know when she was going to be crucified.

HAS THE SPEC. BEEN UP AGAINST IT, TOO?

There's a good deal of danger just now that whatever there is of real merit in the makeup of Hamilton's amateur artists will be spoiled by too much indiscriminate praise and not enough honest criticism.—Hamilton Spectator.

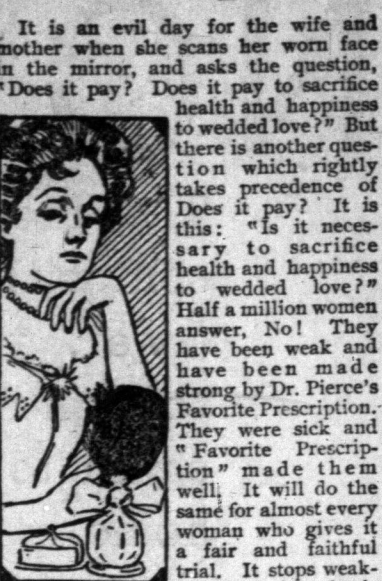

SCHOOL CHILDREN AS GARDENERS. Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Scientific gardening is taught in the national schools of Sweden, and in the seminaries for the education of national school teachers. There is a school garden in nearly every rural school district in the kingdom. The garden is placed near the school house and the children receive practical instruction in the cultivation of plants, berries, flowers, herbs and fruits, the management of hotbeds, greenhouses, etc. The parishes are required to furnish the necessary ground for the gardens, and trees and shrubs are annually given to the children to be planted at their homes.

INSURANCE COSTS LESS. Pearson's Weekly.

Our life insurance is to cost us less because we are living longer than we ever have before. Within the half century the average of human life has risen from about 33 years to very nearly 45 years, and the mortality tables on which our annual premiums are based are to be revised. It has been known for a long time that modern methods of life and the advance in science had added materially to the longevity of manhood, but not until now has the matter been viewed from its commercial side.

Retrospect.

It is an evil day for the wife and mother when she scans her worn face in the mirror, and asks the question, "Does it pay? Does it pay to sacrifice health and happiness to wedded love?" But there is another question which rightly takes precedence of Does it pay? It is this: "Is it necessary to sacrifice health and happiness to wedded love?" Half a million women answer, No! They have been weak and have been made strong by Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. They were sick and "Favorite Prescription" made them well. It will do the same for almost every woman who gives it a fair and faithful trial. It stops weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. It tranquilizes the nerves and encourages the appetite.

"I expected to become a mother, and a threatened miscarriage greatly weakened me," writes Mrs. E. A. Nations, of Willis Springs, Jersey Co., Ark., "and my old disease returned. My husband got another doctor for me but I seemed to just drag along and get no better. At last I told the doctor that if his medicine did not help me I would go back to Dr. Pierce's medicine. I did so, and by the time I had taken them one month I could do my own housework, except washing and ironing my garden too. I was stouter than I had ever been while waiting for my children. My baby came (this one was the sixth child). She is now eleven months old and is a healthy child. As for me, I feel as young now as I did at eighteen years of age. I am thirty now. I can honestly recommend Dr. Pierce's medicine to all suffering womanhood."

SEA FIGHTS ON PAPER.

Our Naval Officers Study Strategy Based on Imaginary Wars.

Many persons have never heard of the Naval War college at Newport, R. I. This institution has a president, a faculty and a college staff on duty the year round and a class of 25 to 30 officers ordered in at attendance from June to September inclusive. The class is composed mainly of officers of executive and command rank and is divided for work into committees of six to eight members, the senior in each being chairman. The committees are assigned separate rooms, with chart tables and desks.

Work for the class is cut out by the staff during the winter, including "strategic situations" based upon imaginary wars between the United States and various foreign powers. To make the wording of these impersonal "United States" is always designated as "the blue" and the foreign power as "the red." The military and naval forces of the two countries are compiled and classified and all their bases and lines of communication carefully studied before the "situation" is prepared.

Copies of this situation are then given to the chairmen of two committees, one being informed that he is commander in chief of "the red" and the other that he commands "the blue," and they are informed that the game is to be played on a certain day.

On the day appointed for the game a large chart table is placed in a central room. Upon the table is tacked a chart of the theater of operations, and besides this are placed red and blue lead pencils, rulers, dividers, duplicating notebooks and a record sheet, while around the board are hung for reference telegraphic cable maps, compass maps and sailing station maps. There is also provided a spinning arrow to decide the direction of the wind or nature of the weather when this is of importance, also a table of classes of vessels, with fighting values, speeds and endurance and viability.

Lucky English Servants.

Nowadays householders who wish for peace and comfort have to study their servants quite as much as they do their family and friends. I was hearing lately of a big country house where the domestic arrangements are really luxurious. The bedrooms are really quite equal to the ordinary guestrooms in a country house, and a set of rooms is especially allotted to them for their recreation, consisting of a billiard room, a music room, a library and billiard room. Card tables are arranged in the billiard room, and a billiard marker is especially kept for the servants. The music room is provided with pianos and violins, and when the house is full of people dances are frequent.—London Outlook.

CROMWELL THE LITTLE.

Vicissitudes in the Life of Oliver Cromwell's Son—They Were Very Sharp in Contrast.

The wheel of fortune has strange turnings, but it has not often turned so completely round as in the case of Cromwell in 1659. In April, Richard Cromwell sat on the throne of England, King in all but name, master of two palaces, with an allowance of £10,000 a year. In May he was dethroned and in a strange land, a fugitive, not from justice, but from the law. In his trunk were the congratulations he had received a month or two before from the crowned heads of Europe. A dozen years before his father's name had made the world tremble; now it was a name to which his son dared not answer. His wife waited 15 years for his return, and died without seeing him again; his favorite daughter, Dorothy, was married and buried in a few months. She was the only Cromwell, somebody had said, "born in the purple."

Cromwell came home at last to live in lodgings at 10 shillings a week. Nobody guessed that the Mr. Clark who lived simply and quietly at Chestnut was the man who had been the protector of the Commonwealth. Mrs. Pengelly, his landlady, kept his accounts in great detail, and Sir Richard Tangye has unearthed many of them, which give us strange glimpses of the latter life of Cromwell's son. He smoked a great deal, paying 2 shillings 8 pence per gross for his "pypes," and he was generous even in his poverty. On one occasion he borrowed from his landlady, who entered it down for the day "when you had your feast." When his daughters came to see him from Hursley, his home in better days, Richard would treat them to a comfortable dinner in Westminster, borrowing the money from good Mrs. Pengelly, who seems to have done something to soften the hard fate to which an unfortunate countryman had doomed the son of Cromwell.

More than once Richard had come to his last shilling. Once, when visiting at Hursley, he had to put off his return for want of a shirt. But generally he seems to have been a tolerably happy man, blessing everybody in spite of circumstances, and blaming none. When Queen Mary died he spent half a crown, we are told, on a pair of mourning gloves. His last days were made unhappy by a painful quarrel with his daughters concerning the property at Hursley. The daughters did their utmost to deprive their father of his rights, and though his life had not been hard enough, and in his old age Richard, who had left Whitehall Palace freely years before, was driven from his own home. A lawsuit established his rights at last, and before his death the family was at peace again. "Live in love," he said to his daughters, as he lay dying at Hursley, in 1712.

There is a story told of a great ceremonial in which Queen Anne was the central figure. The Queen was surrounded by a host of gayly dressed courtiers, and in the throng was an old man, a settler in the plain dress of a country farmer. "Have you ever seen such a sight before?" asked a looker-on, and the throng was startled to hear the old man say: "Never since I sat in her chair." It was Cromwell's son.—London St. James Gazette.

Herbivorous Flesh Eaters.

While scientists and people in general are discussing the merits of vegetarianism for men, a German has been making some observations on this subject among animals.

Certain monkeys, which are usually strict vegetarians, occasionally go down to the shore and have a feast of mussels and crabs. Gorillas and chimpanzees, too, now and then abandon vegetarianism and exhibit a liking for young birds.

But a departure of this sort seems less remarkable than a development of a taste for flesh on the part of a horse, for example. Yet there have been horses that were truly carnivorous.

The French traveler, Bovalot, saw horses regularly fed on raw meat in Thibet, and Sanderman, in Africa, surprised horses in the act of licking the blood-covered bones of antelopes, though horses usually show great repugnance to the sight and smell of blood. According to Stockwell, the cattle of the Lake Huron region often eat fish which has been applied to the fields for a fertilizer.

Fish eating is not uncommon among horses, particularly Shetland ponies.

A herd of 180 of them, when taken to America recently, had to be "pastured" for a time on the beach to satisfy their craving for fish and seaweed. They were gradually weaned and accustomed to the usual fare of horses, but they retained their liking for fish, and transmitted it to their descendants.

In Kamchatka in winter horses and cattle, as well as human beings, have to live chiefly on fish.—London Express.

Tense and True.

Riches are the wings that make an angel of just a plain, ordinary girl. A widow is entitled to her third, but men are usually shy after she has planted her second.

Many a man who travels on the right road is headed the wrong way. Few people die of love, although lots of young folk are dead in love. If a woman hasn't any other object in life she can act as companion to a pug dog.

The millionaire who has a titled son-in-law has something to look up to and put up for.

A new broom is able to raise more dust in a minute than a fresh young man can produce in 1,000 years.

It takes a genuine philosopher to discover a number of good and sufficient reasons why other people should be satisfied with their condition in life.

In love we seldom think of moral qualities, and scarcely of intellectual ones. What then?
