WOMAN'S POWER

Perfection of Form, Feature, and Mind Render Women All-Powerful. Health, However, the Greatest Charm.

Woman's greatest gift is the power to inspire admiration, respect, and love. There is a beauty in health which is more attractive to men than mere regularity of features,

The snap and spirit which health gives to the eye, the movement, and the speech are full of magnetism.

Sickly women can't understand this. They only know that they are miserable, and their efforts to be attractive are languid and weak. Woman's influence in the world is limited by her strength, and the strength of health is real strength. It brings with it beauty and grace and loveliness of disposition. To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study. If she would be all she may, she must guard well against the signs of ill health.

Regular and painless menstruation is absolutely necessary. The help which Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gives to women who are attacked by any disorder of the feminine organism is real, permanent help. It cures all weaknesses of the organs and makes it possible for women to retain their health and beauty to maturity.

Mrs. Pinkham advises women who are ill free of cost. Address her at Lynn, Mass. Thousands owe their health to her.

A Boston Woman's Experience.

"DEAR MRS. PINEHAM: - I feel very grateful to you for the benefit I derived from your kind advice and remedies. I was troubled with a compli-cation of female troubles, had ovaritis, painful and irregular menstruation, leucorrhœa, nervousness and weakness. I had no appetite and could not sleep nights. The least exertion would cause shortness of breath and dull pains in my hips and side. The doctors all advised me to have an operation and have one of my ovaries removed, but this I could not bear to think of. I and have one of my ovaries removed, but this I ould not bear to think of. I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking the first bottle I was much improved. It renewed my appetite, health and strength. I continued taking it, also your Blood Purifier and Sanative Wash until entirely cured of all my troubles. The pains have never returned and my health is splendid. Your remedies have been a boon to me and I am sure many a woman owes her life to them."— MARIE WEBB, 356 Columbus Ave., Boston, Mass. (March 15, 1901.)

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such hosts of grateful friends. Remember this when you go to buy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

HER SECOND ENGAGEMENT

By COLIN S. COLLINS

Copyright, 1901, by A. S. Richardson

"I've come for that job," announced a voice in which there was a quiver despite the assurance of the speech. "I need it in my business, and you might as well let me have it before I talk you to death.'

Francis Bartow looked up with an amused smile. As he had been a theatrical manager for seventeen years he was used to all sorts of demands from players, actual and prospective, but the speech accorded so illy with the tiny little figure before him that he could not conceal his amusement. Hers was a serious face, with big, pathetic eyes and a mouth that quivered in spite of the bold front its owner turned to Bartow.

"What job?" he asked. "I have two positions still unfilled. One is the leading woman. You could not play that. The other is a small part, hardly a dozen lines. That would not be worth while.

"I guess it would be nearer my ability," she said, with a quaint little laugh. "You see, I've never been on the stage before, and I couldn't very well do leading business, could I?"

Bartow gave a low whistle. "May I inquire," he asked, with mock gravity, "why, such being the case, you make a peremptory demand upon me for that place?" The round eyes opened wider. "Well, you see," she explained, "I had to have a position if I ever got on the stage. The others all said their companies were filled, so I thought if I insisted upon it you might try me." "It's a hard life, my child," he urged.

"I need actresses in my business, but I don't like to see you making a try. It's better to stay home with your people and go to the theater to see acting rather than try it yourself."

The rosy mouth took on a look of determination. "I've simply got to go on the stage," she announced. "All the other places are filled, and I must have this. I have no people to go to, and I can't go on typewriting the rest of my life. Please," the voice grew pleading, "give me a little chance. I'll try Bartow was known as a hard man to do business with, but this odd mixture of bravado and timidity caught his fancy. He reached into a pigeonhole and drew out a blue covered part book. "Here," he said, "take this home and study it. Report at Lyric hall for rehearsal a week from Monday at 11 sharp. I'll start you at twenty. If you make good, there will be more. What are your name and address?" She gave a glad little cry as she took the part and hugged it to her breast. Then, acting on impulse, she leaned over, and her lips lightly brushed his forehead. "You are so good!" she murmured, and she had left the office be fore Bartow had recovered sufficiently to repeat his question concerning her name and address. For a few moments he sat quietly wrapped in absorption so deep that the cigar he had laid aside when his visitor entered smoldered and grew rank. It had been years since he had been kissed-like that.

The stage manager's entrance "Henderson," he said, "I have just engaged a child to play the part of Alice in the new piece. I forget her name, but she will be at rehearsal all right. Be easy with her. She is new to the stage." Bartow was the first man in Lyric hall the day set for the initial rehearsal. He had given more than a little thought to his new actress and was impatient to see whether she would come. He had not been there more than ten minutes when she entered, herself half an hour before the time

"You have learned one lesson," he said, "punctuality. It's a good habit to get into, but it's a hard one to acquire apparently. Do you know you never told me your name the other day?"

"I don't think I knew it myself," she said frankly. "It was so strange to realize that I had really been engaged that I was all upset. Why, I got on the elevated to go uptown to Seventy-seeond street and rode all the way to South ferry. I had taken the wrong train and everything. You see, my peo ple died, and I was left all alone. Typewriting was awfully hard, and I just knew that I would succeed on the stage, but nobody would give me a trial. I think I acted as though I were scared, and that was against me, so I summened up all my courage and came to you with a demand, and it worked."

"But the name?" he persisted. "Oh, that! It's Edna Grant. I was thinking of taking some big name for the stage. Would you?"

"I will advise you about that later," he answered. "Meanwhile you work hard, and if you make out well later on I may let you have the part of the wife. Here is Mr. Henderson, our stage manager. Come, and I will introduce you." The introduction accomplished, Bartow left the hall, his mind filled with the vision of a pretty face. "She is a mere child," he mused, "and far too pretty to daub her face with paint and powder. Still"- The thought was left unfinished as he made a hasty movement to elude a cable car. Henderson's reports were hardly favorable to the newcomer. To all of his complaint Bartow only laughed. "Give her a chance," he said. "She is determined to be an actress, and the only way is to prove to her that she can't act. The part is not important. She won't hurt the piece. Meanwhile have some one else handy." Bartow watched several rehearsals and soon saw that Henderson was right, but his observation only intensified the interest with which he regarded her, and he went on with the company to the opening stand.

Miss Grant had little to do, but even that little was so poorly performed that the company regarded her pityingly. The manager was in a box, they knew, and they expected that he would come behind and give her the customary notice. Contrary to expectation, he did not leave his box until the final curtain. Then he made his way to the stage. Over in one dark corner a little heap of white caught his eye. It was the dress she had worn in the last act. He made his way to her, and as he approached the sound of sobs fell upon his ear. He leaned over.

"Don't cry," he urged. "You can't help things by crying."

She turned a tearful face to his. "But you must be so disappointed! I spoiled the play for you after you were so good to give me a chance. Now I can't even keep this part, to say nothing of the wife you promised if I did well." "You may have the part of the wife,"

An instant's silence, then her hand stole into his. "I guess I had better take the part," she whispered. "I know I can put my heart into my work, and I think my second engagement will turn out better than my first."

Parker's First Stories. Gilbert Parker said of his first at tempt at authorship: "I went to Archibald Forbes, with whom I was acquainted, to have him give me a note to the Macmillans, as I wanted to see whether they would not bring out a book of short stories for me. He read the stories and then invited me around to dine to give me the letter of introduction and his opinion of the stories. 'I have read your sketches,' he said after dinner, 'and I must say this of them-I have never seen such a fine collection of titles in my life.' 'There, don't say another word, Mr. Forbes,' I said. 'I understand perfectly. Each title suggests a complete idea which the story fails to carry out. I understand perfectly.' Thereupon I went home and burned every one of them. Then I sat down and wrote the first of the 'Pierre' series, which was the beginning of whatever success I ever Unimpressed by Royalty. The Duchess of Connaught during a visit to Egypt some years ago accompanied the duke at an inspection of the troops outside Omdurman.

In consequence of an accident to her saddle the duchess could not ride back on horseback, and the only ready way of reaching home was the fitting up of a gun carriage into a sort of sedan chair. In this way the duchess was carried back by Egyptian gunners in charge of a native officer, and at the end of the journey the duchess thanked the gunners and said to the officer: "I hope your men are not tired after conveying me." The native had not been trained in the social and royal courtesies, and his answer was not the most apt reply conceivable. "Indeed, no, madam," said he. "You are no heavier than the gun they are accustomed to carry!" Chances of Life and Death,

The following table is one that is used by the London assurance companies, showing the prospect of life at various ages. It is the result of several years of careful calculation and is said to seldom prove misleading or incorrect. Of course sudden and premature deaths, as well as lives unusually extended, occasionally occur, but this is a table of average expectancy of life of the ordinary man or woman: A person 1 year old may expect to live 39 years longer; of 10 years, 51; of 20 years, 41; of 30 years, 34; of 40 years, 28; of 50 years, 21; of 60 years, 14; of 70 years, 9; of 80 years, 4. Readers can easily gather from the above statement facts which will tell them, approximately at least, how many years longer they may reasonably expect to live according to the law of averages.

Catarrhal Poisons and Their Remedy

The poisonous secretions from Catarrh are dangerous because they afect the stomach and bowels, giving rise to an unhealthy condition of these organs. Catarrh is the source of much ill health and was considered practically incurable until it was demonstrated to the satisfaction of the medical profession that by the use of Catarrhozone any case of nasal or throat trouble can be permanently and quickly cured. Catarrhozone by this unusual merit has enlisted the support and endorsement of the most prominent medical authorities, who freely state that any one giving it a trial is sure to receive permanent benefit. Much talk is no demonstration of bility; the noisiest automobile does not always win the race.

"More haste, less speed," and "hasten slowly," are proverbs born of experience that some things can't be hurried without loss or waste. That is specially true of eating. The railway lunch habit, "five minutes for refreshments," is a habit most disastrous to the health. You may hurry your eating. You can't hurry your digestion, and the neglect to allow proper time for this important function is the beginning of sorrows to many a busy man. When the tongue is foul, the head aches, when there are sour or bitter risings, undue fullness after eating, hot flushes, irritability, nervousness, irresolution, cold extremities, and other annoying symptoms be sure the stomach and organs of digestion and nutrition have "broken down." Nothing will re-establish them in active, healthy operation so quickly as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It strengthens the sto-mach, nourishes the nerves, purifies the blood, and builds up the body. It s a strictly temperance medicine containing no alcohol or other intoxicant. Given away! ribbon, even lace gowns being decorated in this style. Irish crochet lace is very fashionable, although it is too heavy for muslin gowns.

Sleeves are undoubtedly growing larger, and this increase has encroached well above the elbow, but the newest sleeves have only a small top piece which fits the arm. The tight portion is trimmed or bordered in some fashion, and the lower part is arranged in quite a different style. The plain elbow sleeve is no longer quite the thing. It must have a puff at the elbow or a fall of lace in the shape of a graduated ruffle.

A smart foulard gown for a girl is here illustrated. The waist has a yoke of tucked mousseline de sole and a simulated bolero effect of tucking. Velvet ribbon is apparently passed behind the box plaits of the waist. The sleeves are tucked and have full wrist puffs. The skirt is plain, with the exception of three ruffles.
