Murderic the Matabeles. CAPE TOWN, O. 26.—An interview with colonist name. Davis in reference to the a colonist nar Matabele raid at ort Victoria, and alleged atrocities commuted by the British, was recently published in the Pretoria press. Davis declared hat the stories about Davis declared that the stories about Mashonas being assaulted in the streets were unfounded. The impi, he said, never entered the town but Dr. Jameson summoned the Matasle headmen, who were deferential, while Dr. Jameson himself brusquely gave them an hour in which to cross the Matable border, 30 miles distat. Davis thus describes the pundit: Davis took the impi seven miles from Victoria. They were going at a jog-trot. Many were unmounted. Dr. Jameson immediately ordered us to fire. Our men were mad and shot down the Matabeles like rabbits, pointing indiscriminately at the dead, the dying and wounded. Twenty-five of the Matabeles were killed. Each body contained enough bullets to kill a dozen. The Matabeles never turned when we opened fire on them. Only one, an old man, fired a return shot, and he was immediately brained. Another Matabele was brained with a gun stock, which was smashed by the blow. It was sickening work, yet on returning to Fort Victoria we were cheered as though we had wen a second Waterloo."

The chartered company's officials in Cape Town refer to Davis' statements as the calumnious charges of a disappointed colonist. Sir Henry Loch, the governor and commander-in-chief, is investigating the story. He is also inquiring into the recent arrest at Tati of the three leaders of a small party of Matabele, who had entered the town. One of the leaders was Lobengula's brother Gubegubo, who says he was entrusted with a mission to Dr. Jameson.

A dispatch from Cape Town says that the telegraph beyond Fort Tuil has been broken again.

The engine and fireman, who resided in Jersey City, were pulled out from the debris badly injured. At the same time the bodies of three tramps were separated from the kindling wood of the wreeked freight train. The poor fellows had been mangied beyond all human semblance. Pullman sleeping cars were derailed and torn from their trucks. There was wild commotion among the terrified passengers. It is claimed all succeeded in getting safely out of the berths, but this assertion I view with great doubts. I think when the mass of wreekage is cleared away lifeless bodies will yet be found. THE LOST NARONIC.

Interest in the Missing Vessel Revived.

One of the Ill-Fated Steamer's Boats Picked Up at Lea.

LONDON, Oct. 26 .- Capt. Anderson, Ayres, from Chicoutini, writes from the Argentine capital under date of Sept. 20 that he found on July 21, in latitude 36° north, longitude 33° west, one of the boats of the White Star steamer Naronic, boats of the White Star steamer Naronic, which was lost at sea many months ago.

Capt. Anderson adds that the boat was bottom up and contained nothing whatever. It was thickly covered with barnacles, and there was a large hole in the bottom. The lashings of the boat appeared to have been cut in a great hurry, and with such force that the rail beneath where the lashings had been fastened was severed. The patent unhooking apparatus had not been used.

The Naronic, which was valued at $500, 000, sailed from Liverpool on Feb. 11. She was commanded by William Roberts, one was commanded by William Roberts, one of the most competent captains in the White Star Line's service, and had altogether 72 persons on board—the crew numbering 55 men. Severe gales swept the Atlantic on Feb. 16, five days after the Naronic started, and it is surmised that in one of these storms the vessel went to the bottom, nothing definite having ever been learned as to the fate of the steamer and those on board.

Brought Home. Burnt Almost Beyond Recognition-Both Hands Burnt Off and Legs Broken-A Jack-knife, a Handkerchief and the Skeleton of a Valise Represent His Effects.

The Sarnia section of the Eric Limited The Sarnia section of the Eric Limited brought in the second body early yesterday morning of the unfortunate men who left on that ill-inted train for Chicago just a week ago to-day. This time it was the body of Robert D. Colgrove, who in life resided with his family near "Glenmore," in London township. There came home with the body the three sons Frederick, Charles and William. To all it was a sad home-coming, but more especially in the case of Frederick, who left home seven years ago never to return until the sad and sorrowful occasion of yesterday. Master Robert Colgrove was who left home seven years ago never to return until the sad and sorrowful occasion of yesterday. Master Robert Colgrove was at the station to meet the train; so was Mr. Cain Steele, of this city (an uncle of Mrs. Colgrove), and birs. Steele. The train was late and did not get in until 12:30 midnight. The coffin, encased in a zinc-lined shell, was lifted out of the baggage car to a truck. "It's not very heavy," remarked the baggageman, as he moved it off to one side, and it certainly was not. Mr. Frederick Colgrove states that the identification of the body was complete. It could not be recognized by wearing apparel, as the clothing was burned completely off. Both hands were burned off and both legs broken. The body was frightfully burned, not a feature being recognizable. A peculiarity about the toes known to the family was one of the means of identification; another was the general shape of the skull. One of the boys thought they could identify the remains from a gold filling in one of the teeth. On arriving at Battle Creek they found a hole in the tooth, but no gold—it had probably melted in the heat of the flames. There were other peculiarities about the remains that assure the sons that they have brought home the body of their father. All that could be found of Mr. Colgrovo's belongings were a jack-knife, a handkerchief and the skeleton of his valise. There is some uncertainty about the remains of the grip, butfrom the his value. size and shape the sons feel that they have the right one.

The body was taken to Ferguson's morgue and will be buried from there in Mount Pleasant Cemetery to-day. Mrs. Coigrove is said to bear up well under her trying affliction. There are seven boys and girls left with the sorrowing widow. Fred, Charles and William have grown to man's estate, the former being a successful Chicego lawyer, Charles a commercial traveler, and William a lithographer in the city. The rest of the family reside on the farm. They are Viotoria, Robert, May and Mark. Yesterday was little Mark's birthday, and a memorable one it will be. Mr. Colgrove was an old resident of London township, and previous to his wedding, 30 years ago, he taught school at Melrose. He was a member of the London West Methodist Church.
