ON THE WAY.

Mr. Samuel Shaw is on the war path, and has issued an ultimatum to the Government, which, if not complied with, will be followed by a declaration of hostilities. Mr. Shaw's ultimatum is made in the form of a letter to the Colonist, and is a reply to a letter from Mr. Dunsmuir, which appeared in the same paper. Mr. Shaw's letter is a curious production, and, as a specimen of composition, is not to be despised. It is, however, more remarkable for its matter than for its manner. Mr. Shaw is a man of many words, and he has a great deal to say. He is also a man of strong feelings, and he has a great deal to feel. He is, moreover, a man of decided opinions, and he has a great deal to express. Mr. Shaw's letter is, therefore, a very long letter, and it is full of feeling and opinion. Mr. Shaw is very angry with Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much surprised at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much grieved at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much disgusted with Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much astonished at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much pained at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much hurt at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much annoyed at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much vexed at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much irritated at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much incensed at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much enraged at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much exasperated at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much provoked at Mr. Dunsmuir, and he tells him so in a very long letter. Mr. Shaw is very much nettled
