Bridgetown Boy Scouts' Camp

A DIARY BY ONE OF THE SCOUTS

On Tuesday morning, August 1st, we met at headquarters at seven o'clock and loaded our "tuck" and baggage on the cart. The cart started out and the main body of scouts followed on Mr. Bent's hay cart. When we arrived at the foot of the mountain, we pushed on the back of the load with our staves and helped the horses to climb the steep hills. When we got to Milberry's Lake we set to work and put up the tents. By the time we had the four tents up it was time to turn in, so we all went to bed feeling pretty tired.
 On Wednesday we cut pine boughs and made beds. We then put up the camp stove in the cook house. Our cook house was a little log cabin owned by Rev. Mr. Cheese. We then went to the mill and brought boards to build our dining booth. We built a frame and covered it with a sail which was lent to us by Capt Longmire. In the afternoon we went to the Bay and had a good swim and a row.
 On Thursday the Beaver patrol had the cooking to do. The Cuckoos and Wild Boars made a map of the lake and surrounding country. The assistant Scoutmaster Hiltz set up a flag staff. In the afternoon we went to the Observation Tower on Young's Mountain.
 On Friday morning the Wild Boars are cooks. We come to breakfast and find that we must drink burnt cocoa as a result of "pigs" for cooks. After breakfast we went to the Bay and stayed all day.
 On Saturday morning we got up and tidied up our tents extra early as our friends were coming. The Cuckoos were cooks. Our friends came about ten o'clock and we all had dinner in the booth. After dinner we had a peanut scramble. The peanuts were supplied by Mr. Nuggles. Gordon Charlton won, having thirty-two peanuts. Then our friends wanted to see us swim, so we all went to the swimming hole in the Lake, where we always had a good time. We then had Indian wrestles, after this we divided into two classes for long jumping. Paul Longmire won in one and Clarence Kinney in the other. We then had high jumping, in which two of us jumped the same height. We then had running. The winners were Clarence Kinney, Rex Harlow and the Salter.

On Sunday morning we had services at camp. In the afternoon we marched to Young's Cove to church, and in the evening we had another service at the camp with about fifty people from the shore and Belleisle attending.

On Monday morning Mr. Crisp, of Hampton, came to take our pictures. He took one picture of us in front of our tents and then one of us in line formation. He then said that he would like to see how good we were at facing fire. So we lined up, but our ranks soon broke when he began to throw candy and nuts at us. He then took our pictures in swimming. In the afternoon we had a scout game in the woods.

On Tuesday we played a scout game in the morning. In the afternoon we cleaned the brush out of our tents and were then free to do as we pleased. We played quoits and went swimming. In the evening a large number of people gathered and we had a band to entertain them. The band consisted of a mouth-organ, a wash-basin for snare-drum and a tin can for a bass drum. We saluted the flag and took it down. We then went to the lake-side where we had a large fire and sang songs. After the moon came up we had Indian wrestles and other sports.

On Wednesday morning we cleaned up and took down our tents. We then loaded the cart and walked down the mountain. Here we found teams to bring us home. We arrived home safely. All say that we had a fine time.

Dartmouth Lakes Claims Two Dartmouth People As Victims

(Halifax Herald, Aug. 18th.)

No accident which ever occurred on the Dartmouth Lakes, happily the scene of comparatively few fatalities has caused such widespread sorrow as that which occurred Wednesday night. The widespread popularity of the two victims, both in the prime of life, makes the loss personal to thousands in Halifax and Dartmouth.

Percy Simmonds, son of James Simmonds, Dartmouth, and Miss Nellie Burton, daughter of H.P. Burton, residing in Dartmouth, are the victims in a double drowning accident supposed to have taken place about nine o'clock Wednesday night.

About 6.30 o'clock Mr. Simmonds and Miss Burton left the Banook boat-house in a canoe with the intention of paddling up the lakes. The weather had cleared up about this time and the surface of the First Lake was fairly smooth, owing to a temporary lull in the storm. Soon the canoe was lost to sight, and its occupants being seen no more by anybody, as far as can be learned. Very few people ventured out on the lake except the campers, and they had reached their camps and made themselves comfortable for the night before Mr. Simmonds and Miss Burton met with disaster.

CANOE FOUND BY J. FRANK CROWE.

Yesterday morning J. Frank Crowe of Halifax, who is camping on the second lake, near the camp of Town Clerk Alfred Elliott, left his camp about eight o'clock to land his son on road near the ice houses in order that he might proceed to the ferry. As he neared the shore he saw a red canoe on the beach. It was lying bottom up, and had evidently been tossed by the waves against the rocks for hours as the gunwale was much chafed by contact with the rocks. Mr. Simmonds' hat was found in the canoe.

Mr. Crowe towed the canoe to Mr. Elliott's camp, telling him of his discovery. An initial on the hat gave Mr. Elliott an inkling of the truth. He and Mr. Crowe, and others who were notified as they proceeded, went to the place where the canoe had been thrown on the shore. Near this place the paddles bearing the Burton initials and Mr. Simmonds' coat were found. Papers in the pocket of the coat established the identity of the occupants of the craft.

Search was made all along the shore, but to no avail. No trace of the bodies was to be found.

FATHERS JOIN IN SEARCH.

James Simmonds and Mr. Burton, alarmed by the prolonged absence of their son and daughter, went in search of them early yesterday morning. It is not unusual for people when caught in a storm to spend the night with friends at the numerous camps on the lake. Mr. Simmonds had done this on previous occasions and Mr. Burton had hoped that his daughter had done likewise. Failing to find them elsewhere they proceeded to the "Owl's Nest," an island in the lake, where there is a club house, in which, had they been able to reach the island, the occupants of the canoe might have taken shelter. When they found that they were not there the two fathers found it impossible to longer keep up their hopes.

The response to the call for searchers was very general. Grappling irons, trawls, water glasses and other appliances were brought into requisition.

BODIES FOUND YESTERDAY AFTERNOON

The bodies were recovered yesterday afternoon between the "Owl's Nest" (the first island in the second lake) and the mainland in the deep water.

The finding of the bodies indicated that the canoe had been struck by a squall after leaving the shelter of the land. Both were expert swimmers, but apparently they could not utilize their skill in this direction.

SOMETHING ABOUT THE VICTIMS.

Mr. Simmonds, who was under forty years of age, was a prominent member of the Banook Canoe Club, past president of St. George's Lawn Tennis Club, a member of the Red Cap Snowshoe Club, and of other organizations. He was a young man of outstanding ability, a partner in the retail and wholesale hardware business of James Simmonds & Co. His firm was about to branch out into a wider field of activity and extensive building operations are in progress in Halifax to fit up their premises there. Mr. Simmonds was one of the leading workers in the conservative cause in Dartmouth. He was a young man with a very bright future. His wife, a daughter

Order it this time

More bread and better bread of John Allen, Dartmouth, died five or six years ago. He leaves no children.

 Mr. Simmonds is survived by his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. James Simmonds, of Dartmouth, by two brothers, Ralph B. and J. Roland, and a sister, Mrs. Donald Ferguson.

Miss Burton was the daughter of H.P. Burton, of Dartmouth, who formerly engaged in the drug business at Halifax. She was one of the most popular young ladies in Dartmouth and was well-known in Halifax, where she lived until recent years. She was one of the prettiest girls in the town, and was a favorite in social circles. She was one of the most expert tennis players in the province and had won recognition in amateur theatrical circles.

Just what time the accident occurred cannot be said, Miss Burton's watch stopped at 10.45 and Mr. Simmonds' at 10.48. It is thought that the unfortunate couple had endeavored, early in the evening, to come down the lake, but decided to wait for the wind to moderate. It is surmised that they had sought shelter at the "Owl's" for a time, and there being no prospects of the wind dying down started out so as to reach the Club House before the closing hour. The place where the bodies were found was where they would get the full force of the gale after leaving the shelter of the island, and a sudden squall caused the canoe to capsize.

The sad accident has cast a gloom over the town, as both were immensely popular. This is the first summer fatality on the Lakes since the founding of the Banook Canoe Club, of which both victims were members.

Girl Homesteader Rises to Affluence

Miss Bird, Who has Become Big Factor in Wyoming Politics, Shows Advantages of Suffrage State.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 2—Among the western women who have "made good" in politics in those States where equal suffrage is in effect, is Miss Rose Anna Bird, Superintendent of Education and head of the State Board of Charities and Correction of Wyoming.

Less than ten years ago Miss Bird was an unknown "girl homesteader" and country school teacher on the lonely plains of Northern Wyoming. Today she is one of the political leaders of the State, her popularity being attested by the manner in which she ran ahead of her ticket in the election which put Wyoming's present administration in power.

Miss Bird is the first Wyoming woman to be elected to a post of prominence in many years. Through Wyoming was the first State to put woman suffrage in effect, comparatively few women have held office. The present General Assembly has one woman member, Mrs. Mary C. Bellamy, of Laramie, but few women lawmakers that have figured in Colorado's politics. It is said that the indifference of the women themselves has been responsible for their failure to figure more largely in the political affairs of Wyoming a claim that seems reasonable enough when one considers how cheerfully the men of the State voted Miss Bird into office after that energetic young woman man had finished her "spell-binding" tour.

In company with Governor Carey and other officials Miss Bird had just returned from a tour of the State investigating the condition of various public institutions, when a request for an interview was sent to her. She is an unassuming young woman, below ordinary height and with a pleasant face. In fact, this slight girl who is so ready to smile is the antithesis of the stern faced "woman's rights" so dear to the cartoonist whose specialty is depicting types.

"In the first place, don't put me down as a suffragette," said Miss Bird, "I just don't like that word. That's all. The thing I'm proudest of is that I'm a Wyoming product through and through. I wasn't born here, but I lived in this State nearly all my life. There isn't so much to tell about my political affairs. I know what defeat means. The first time I ever tried for office I ran for county superintendent of schools in Weston county, that's my home country, up in Northeastern Wyoming, you know. I was defeated, as most democratic candidates always have been in Wyoming. But next time I tried it again and I won. That gave me a start. I always had liked politics, even in school, because I felt that when one is given political opportunities such as a woman has in Wyoming it is wrong not to make use of them. Well, I was nominated for State Superintendent at the last State election and I was fortunate enough to win."

A STORY OF COURAGE
 Behind Miss Bird's modest recital of her political success there is quite an unusual story of courage. She took up a ranch in Weston county, being one of the "girl homesteaders," whose clan has become quite numerous in the West in recent years. All her schooling had been in Wyoming, and she had been graduated with honors from the State University at Laramie. When she "staked out" her claim" she was offered the post of school teacher. In the sparsely populated district she had selected as her home. She accepted the post, though her school was five miles from her ranch. Her mother and brother helped on the homestead, and Miss Bird saved most of the small salary she received as a teacher. She interested the Wyoming of the district in politics, and organized political meetings and showed her keen interest in the subject that had been neglected by her sisters.

Wyoming is normally a republican State, but on her second attempt for the county superintendent's position Miss Bird upset the party majority in her county. In fact, she made such a phenomenal race that the State campaign managers selected her for the post she now holds when it came time to make up the slate for the election held last November. Former Senator Joseph M. Carey, a lifelong republican, was the nominee of the democratic party against the "regular" republican nominee, Senator Carey's triumph was complete, but none of his democratic supporters equalled his vote. The nearest, however, was Miss Bird who ran far enough ahead of her ticket to justify the predictions of those who had prophesied that the "girl homesteader" would prove to be one of the surprises of the election.

Miss Bird took a prominent part in the heated campaign which preceded the most exciting election Wyoming has ever known. For five weeks she accompanied throughout the State, with the other nominees and did her share of the "spell-binding."

Readers of Mrs. Wharton's, new serial in Scribner's—"Ethan Frome"—have been struck with the dramatic intensity of this tale of New England, which is told with the simplicity of a Greek tragedy.
