

feration of the endothelial cells of the vessels; first, because in the early stages of the process all intermediate stages between the endothelial cells and the fibre-cells resembling muscle-cells may be seen; and, secondly, because he has been able to follow similar changes in a portion of vein confined between two ligatures, when the blood has been evacuated and replaced by some irritating fluid. It will hence be seen that he considers the self-organizing power of the red clot to be nil. The only remains of it that are left after the lapse of some time are particles of pigment scattered through the new growth. —Lancet.
