MERRITTON.

Merritton is now an incorporated village, also situated on the line of the Welland Canal, and, like St. Catharines, indebted to that great public work for its existence. Its population is 1,600, and from the energy and enterprise manifested within its borders lately, it bids fair to rise to importance. It is the connecting link between St. Catharines and Thorold, and from its situation is well adapted for manufacturing purposes. The Lybster Cotton Mills, so justly celebrated, are in Merritton and employ a large number of hands, and there is also another mill owned by Messrs. Wait & Co. engaged in the same business. The Paper Mills of Mr. John Riordon are also here and give employment to 120 men, and several other establishments of more or less extent. Since its incorporation the village has grown rapidly and is still on the increase.
