WESTERN BRANCH FOR

CANADIAN NORTHERN

New Line From Yellowhead Pass to Stewart on Alaskan Boundary—New Road in Alberta

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 8.—A railway from Stewart to Edmonton, according to recent reports, is now on the programme of the Canadian Northern Railway Company, through the charter, it is said, will be applied for in the name of D. Mann, vice-president, who will be a continuing body to connect the latter place with the Portland mines. Mr. Mann already possesses a provincial charter for this proposed line, and it is understood that the application for the Dominion charter is now at the Department of the Interior.

The proposed new line will leave the main line of the company somewhere in the Yellowhead district, and will pass the Peace river and Omineca district, the valley of the Naas, and will follow the Peace river to the Alaskan boundary, having its western terminal at Stewart. Mr. Mann is now in the north to consult with his engineers, who have been seeking the easiest pass over which to carry the new line.

Although in effect a branch of the Canadian Northern, it will probably be known as the Pacific-Alaska railway, and will traverse a country wholly north of the Grand Trunk Pacific and which is at the present time unoccupied.

Broken by an early ground in the Alaskan territory, the road will be pushed as rapidly as labor can be secured. The charter for this road was passed on the Dominion side of the mountain last session and will run through the central part of the province to the Rocky Mountains.
