LOCAL NEWS

NINETEEN BIRTHS.
Five marriages were reported to Registrar J. B. Jones this week. The birth of nineteen children, ten of them boys, also was recorded.

PIE SOCIAL.
In aid of the new Methodist church recently erected at Little River, a delightful basket social and entertainment was held last evening in the Little River school house and a neat sum was realized. Many people went out from the church and assisted in the programme.

NOVELTY SHOWER.
About sixty friends of Miss Pearl Dingle last night gave her an enjoyable surprise by tendering her a novelty shower at the home of her sister, Mrs. T. L. Wilson, 126 Chesley street. She was the recipient of a large number of useful and costly wedding remembrances. All present had an enjoyable time in music and games, with refreshments served about midnight.

DIED IN BOSTON.
Many friends in St. John have heard with regret of the death of William J. Crowley which occurred last week in Boston. He had resided here with his people for several years before going to the states about thirteen years ago. He was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Crowley, and is survived by one sister, Mrs. Edward Wrenn, of Everett, Mass., and one brother, John Bruce Crowley of Boston. Mrs. W. J. Savage of North End is an aunt. Burial took place in Boston.

FACTS ABOUT THE NEW FALLS BRIDGE

Some Idea of The Remarkable Engineering Work

WEIGHT OF 2,000 TONS

Means a Great Deal to the People in Convenience and in the Prospect of New Home Sites

Work on the new steel bridge spanning the reversing falls is still going on merrily and every day people stop to watch the operations, which, from an spectacular point of view, will soon be over. At present the men are riveting and also erecting stringers and other details of the steel skeleton. The top cord which is being prepared at the company's plant, will not be ready for several days. The final connecting link which it represents, still remains unfinished. The temporary bolt placed a few days ago will remain, though the section will be strongly rivetted when once the cord is put in position.

Much interest to the general observer centres in the crane-like machine called the traveler. During the course of conversation an official explained some details concerning it.

This machine is on rails twenty feet apart, and is run along the bridge to the spot where lifting is required. The crane part and frame-work on front to keep it from tipping when under strain, are all made of steel and power is supplied from the engine in the rear. The machine now being used on the bridge has a lifting capacity of twenty-two tons and from this fact alone the magnitude of the work is made more clear. Each of the cords, which are twenty-four feet long, weigh eight tons and is lifted by this machine with apparent ease and guided to a nicely just where it is expected to be set.

A good deal of talk was caused by passers by when the western section of the bridge was hoisted into position. Here again actual figures come as a surprise, for it is learned that the weight of that half amounted to about 900 tons and from this it will be seen that the anchors which upheld this stretch of steel must be capable of great resistance. The entire bridge weighs almost 2,000 tons, and of course the weight is distributed, that being one of the particular feats of the engineers.

The length of the steel spans, each of which has often been quoted as though that were the entire length of the bridge, but in reality there are two approaches spans which must be taken into consideration, and they are each approximately forty-eight feet long, this adding to the general dimensions.

Reinforced concrete will compose the floor and double tracks for street railway purposes are to be laid on the stringers, the top of the rail being level with the road-bed. Sidewalks of the regulation seven feet width, and to be laid and will project over each side perhaps four or five feet. The projecting section will be upheld by stringers and brackets of steel and the floor is to be concrete.

A matter causing more or less comment is the number of Indians employed on this job, and who came here as skilled workmen. Many of the race do follow that occupation regularly and as an instance of this it may be of interest to relate that in the Quebec Bridge disaster, thirty-three Indians lost their lives. Right across the river from Lachine and the Dominion Bridge Co's plant an Indian Reservation is located and no doubt the proximity of the big works accounts to some extent for the number of Indians who enter that employ.

The new bridge means a great deal to the residents of Lancaster and West St. John, as it will be possible to take a car in the city and go straight through to Carleton without transferring in less time than by boat.

Fairville people have always looked upon the coming of the bridge as a boon to that section, for the walk across the old Suspension with a wait on either side, kept many home builders from choosing Lancaster as a residential possibility.

It has been said on good authority that when transportation arrangements have been completed a trip by car from the foot of King street in the city to the head of Main street, Fairville, can be made in less than twenty minutes. The Fairville car would operate there the length of Main street, connecting with the Carleton car at what is known as Fairville crossing. This schedule would allow time for those employed in the city to go to the streets bounds of the railway system and return during the dinner hour and many, no doubt, are prepared to partake of home dinners with keen relish.

All told the advantages of the work, nearing a finish are many. The details of erection are, needless to say, being very attractively watched by those who

The Man In The Street

Aside from his positive military inclinations, the other hobby of the Hon. Col. Sam seems to be posing for the press photographers.

One of the British monitors recently doing effective work on the Belgian coast was under Command Arthur Snagge, making it unnecessary to further explain as to what the Germans struck.

The theological editor of the Times-States departed from his usual air of seriousness and savviness today and flippantly inquired "Do the dogs of war pronounce Kiyi?"

Talking of Apples
The department of agriculture seems to intimate that "an apple a day" will chase the germs if not the Germans.

And despite their name there is no reason to view even the "northern Spies" with suspicion.

Talking of apples, have you done your duty by your country and your family and bought a barrel?

If the apples in the goods, according to the advertised promises, the doctors may feel that they have grounds for action against the government for destroying their practice.

They say that the troops at the front are threatened with lockjaw from powder burns. No wonder Colonel Sam is coming home.

The German officers who boasted that they would be in London in four weeks may get there—as prisoners.

It even applies in the police court. A casual observer, dropping in there any morning would be inclined to remark, "Business as Usual."

A very pug-nosed youngster was standing on a street corner and pointing to a young man that was passing, and saying, "D'ye see the way that man is looking at my nose? I'll bet he's a reporter."

"Why, what makes you think so?" queried the other.

"Cause," the pug-nosed one replied, "Reporters always like to see things turn up."

The expression, "Talk Business, Not War," was never meant for the Kaiser or the newspapers.

A Modern Fairy Tale
The Sphinx opened one battered eye upon a troubled world and described Aboukir, the desert spirit, curled up on the sand at his base. Looking down wearily he said, "O, Aboukir, my sleep has been troubled by a most distressing dream, which I cannot efface from my memory. I see a lot of people walking along a dark way with much difficulty. They alight from a conveyance at a place where the particularly bright and plunge immediately into an abyss of Stygian darkness, bounding along, now tumbling over hills, now tramping into slimy hollows, but all the time pushing a heavy cart. The cart is made of stretched steel strips, much like railway tracks, but they lie idle; and the people strain their eyes through the darkness to gaze upon them and sigh."

The spirit arose, yawned and stretched his limbs. "I know that place," he said, as he faded into thin air, "It is called East St. John."

CAUGHT AT THEFT OF NEWSPAPERS

Boy Arrested, as Annoyance of This Kind Must Be Done Away With

Several merchants and others have been complaining lately that their newspapers were not being delivered regularly. The matter was investigated and a sharp lookout has been kept. This morning between six and seven o'clock a boy who said he was only twelve years of age was arrested when he was seen taking a bundle of telegrams from the door of E. G. Nelson & Company, King street. The boy gave a wrong name and wrong address to the police. His mother appeared on the boy's behalf when he was brought before Magistrate Ritchie in the juvenile court this morning. She said that he had been taken away from school to be employed as a messenger boy but found that he was too young. The magistrate said the boy should never have been taken away from school when he was so young and said that small boys could not go out in the streets nowadays without wearing their hats and shoes. The boy was allowed to go with a warning which should be effective.

REV. MR. ARMSTRONG MAKES BUT SLOW RECOVERY

Rev. R. A. Armstrong, rector of Trinity church, who has been suffering from painful injuries received from burns as a result of an accident while on a camping expedition several months ago, is still in a somewhat serious condition in Orillia, Ontario where he had been visiting. Mr. Armstrong is said to be recovering very slowly.

F. J. G. Knowlton, one of the wardens of Trinity church and a personal friend of Mr. Armstrong has gone to visit him and it is said that arrangements are being made to have the patient removed to one of the hospitals in Toronto where he will receive the best of medical attendance as it is understood that a large amount of skin grafting has been found necessary to insure his recovery. The many St. John friends of Rev. Mr. Armstrong and especially members of Trinity congregation sincerely hope that his health will soon be restored, and that he will be able to resume his duties here before very long. Mr. Knowlton is expected to return to the city on next Tuesday or Wednesday.
