

OUR NON-PARTIZAN FLAPPER GIVES HER VIEWS ON THE EXCLUSION OF ORIENTALS

Thinks Parliamentarians Have Very Queer and Round About Way of Getting at the Real Reason of Why There Are Not More Canadians in Canada.

No. 7. Some of the members on both sides of the House wore red carnations on their coat lapels today. Neither side threw the carnations upon the ground and trampled them because the other side wore them, too. Wonderful self-control those men are developing. I am just getting them all down line. There are two parties—the Government and the Opposition. Then there are the Progressives. They sit on the same side of the House with the Opposition. The Government party, being opposite so it can make eyes at them easily, flirts most atrociously with the Progressives. The Progressives look kind of shy pleased. The Conservatives don't flirt. But there is no slightest harm in it. So, if they want to, I am sure that nobody would object.

One of the Progressives made a most wonderfully interesting speech upon proportionate representation. He must have spent months upon the study of the subject. He spoke for two hours and every time he said a word he gave some valuable, or at any rate interesting, information. Nevertheless, a good many members from both sides of the House spent most of the afternoon outside of the Chamber, peeping in occasionally to see if the same thing were still going on, I suppose, and then going back to the lobby. But perhaps they had heard it all before and knew all about it.

Mr. Progressive explained that the present system of voting does not give proportional representation. He went over several past elections in detail, and showed that the provinces had not the representation for any party which their polled vote had entitled them to have. Sometimes the Liberals were represented by greater numbers than they should have been, sometimes the Conservatives; sometimes the Progressives; sometimes the Labor party. (Oh, yes, there is a Labor party, too. I knew that. But there being only three members, I may be forgiven for sometimes losing them in the crowd. The leader of the Labor party, Mr. Woodworth, is a fine gentleman, too.) Mr. Progressive was absolutely impartial. If the present system of voting had some times given the Progressives more members or less than they should have, he mentioned it just as he would have done in case of the Conservatives or Liberals. That is very unusual in Parliament! He said that, today, the present Government is represented by many more members than it should have, and he stated the exact number. At least I suppose it was exact. It was not contradicted at any rate.

Dear me! I never could tell just what he said, or what the motion vote means. But at any rate it gives the voter a chance to exercise his second and third choice (maybe more choices) in case his favorite candidate is not elected. As many choices, I suppose, as the number of candidates requires. Then, if his first love is not elected, the vote can move on to his second, and then to his third. Then, the final results would give exactly proportional representation. (If that is not the right idea, I am only a flapper, so don't mind.) He told how many countries in other parts of the world were using that kind of vote, how long they had been using it, and the results obtained by each.

When he was through, one of the Liberals made a humorous reply. He congratulated Mr. Progressive upon his impartial and exhaustive information he had given and thought that kind of vote might be all right, though he was thankful, he said, for the present system since it had placed his party in power. It will really make a difference, he said, what kind of voting is used, the Liberals will be sure to win. For instance, under the second choice system, the Liberals would give their second choice to the Progressives, and of course, the Progressives would give their second choice to the Liberals, and, well—that's all there is to it. No Conservative on his map, it seems.

Just then, a Conservative representative from somewhere West, came in. He caught the drift of things, arose and said he was interested in the subject. If he had known that it was going to be discussed, he said he would have come prepared. But at any rate he would like to say a few words. (That's the trouble with most of the members on both sides, you see.) So he said his few words and he did not make things any better about as gracefully as I ever saw that thing done. He proceeded to state that while the theory of proportional representation is good enough, the real thing is not practical. It just can't be used, he said, in any British country. He said something about some country in Europe in connection with the subject. Mr. Progressive, who had spent his afternoon trying to make the situation at home and abroad, clear to the House, arose then and asked if the honorable gentleman was in the House when he had told in detail how the vote had worked in that country.

Hon. Gentleman said—well, no, he was not in the Chamber at the time.

CHANGE OF REQUIREMENTS CONCERNING IMMIGRANTS ENTERING THE COUNTRY

The Change Goes into Effect Immediately—The New Requirements Will Be Test to Determine the Fitness of Immigrants by Their Occupation.

Ottawa, May 15.—(By Canadian Press)—Announcement is made by the Department of Immigration and Colonization of a change of requirements concerning immigrants entering Canada, the change going into effect immediately. Under the new requirements instead of a money test, there will be a test to determine the fitness of immigrants by their occupation.

The new regulations will, it is claimed, facilitate the movement of Britishers from the Mother Country and other self-governing dominions, to Canada, and are framed particularly to encourage settlement in Canada by the agricultural and domestic servant classes as these are the classes immediately in demand. In the cases of persons of other classes entering from the United States, Canada will freely admit those whose labor is required in the Dominion.

Under the new regulations the landing in Canada of any immigrant is prohibited except—
1.—A bona fide agriculturist entering Canada to farm and with sufficient means to begin farming in Canada.
2.—A bona fide farm laborer entering Canada to follow that occupation and with reasonable assurance of employment.
3.—A female servant entering Canada to follow that occupation and with reasonable assurance of employment.

(A) The wife and family of any person, legally admitted to and resident in Canada, who is in a position to receive and care for his dependents.
(B) The national of any country in regard to which there is in operation a special treaty of agreement or convention regulating immigration.
(C) Any British subject entering Canada directly or indirectly from Great Britain or Ireland, the United States of America or any self-governing British Dominion or Newfoundland who shall satisfy the immigration officer in charge at the port of entry that he has sufficient means to maintain himself until employment is secured.
(D) Any American citizen entering Canada from the United States, provided it is shown to the satisfaction of the Minister of Immigration and Colonization that their labor or service is required in Canada.

The British Premier said it was understood that the nations now having commercial agreements pending with Russia would not be prevented by this agreement from completing them.

Mr. Lloyd George said he would not go himself to the Hague.

BRITISH PRIME MINISTER NOT SO OPTIMISTIC

Explains to Newspaper Representatives Agreements Reached on Political Affairs.

Genoa, May 15.—The British Prime Minister, appearing personally at the gathering of British and American correspondents this afternoon, explained the agreement reached during the morning by the sub-committee on political affairs.

When asked what would happen if the Russians refused to accept the plan submitted for the discussion at the Hague, he replied there simply could not be any meeting at the Hague in that case, and that the effort to reach an understanding with Russia would be a failure. In other words he made it clear that the agreement submitted to the Russians was the maximum the Genoa Conference could offer. He said that in his opinion, two commissions sitting at the Hague, and frequently meeting together, completed, in effect, with the Russian suggestion of a commission to discuss financial affairs.

Cannot Meet Wishes Of St. George's Club

City Charter Stands in the Way—Will Seek Legislation—Water Extensions Discussed.

As the city charter does not afford the use of public squares as sports fields, the city council found itself unable to comply with the request of the St. George's Club for the use of the Queen Square, West Side, as a baseball field this year, and decided to seek legislation that would permit the diversion of this area to such a purpose. In the meantime it was decided to use 8-inch chain drainage for the present season to provide a field.

Mary H. Good applied for a position as superintendent of the women's department for the proposed local branch of the federal employment service; she said she had seven years experience in the March bridge mission. It was decided to allow the matter to lie on the table to await any further applications.

The mayor brought up a question raised by Carson Dempster regarding the lines of his lot at Loch Lomond. The deed called for a plot fourteen by sixteen chains, while ex-Engineer Merdock gave him only 6-1/2 chains frontage and depth to correspond with the previous area. The matter was referred to Commissioner Wigmore for report on Thursday.

G. D. Mills was present in connection with his application for a permit to erect a house in Orange street, which had been refused by the building inspector on account of the proposed use of 8-inch concrete blocks and erect a hip-roof.

Commissioner Thornton explained that this district (No. 2) called for a flat roof and 15-inch walls. He suggested that if any work of a similar nature was available that the company be given consideration, as it would cost considerably to get the plant into operation.

The road engineer explained that some repairs were required to the surface a seal coat applied in some places and the shoulders sloped.

Commissioner Frink agreed to go into the matter further and report on the matter Thursday.

Commissioner Frink reported in connection with the payment by the government of its share of excess cost of work for the unemployed. He said he had interviewed the premier, who promised to bring the matter before the meeting of the provincial government this week, and had no doubt the necessary certificate would be forthcoming. He said the total amount involved was $2,411,827; the federal government's share was $1,206,911; provincial government's share $803,927; city's share, $401,977. The report was ordered received.

Regarding application of J. B. Patchell for permission to make an entrance to a gasoline supply station at the corner of Douglas avenue and Prospect point road, it was decided to grant the request, the work to be done under the supervision of the road engineer.

Tenders for 1,075 feet straight and 144 feet circular culvert were opened and referred to Commissioner Frink and the road engineer for report. The prices quoted a foot were: Granite Street Paving and Construction Co., straight $1.75; circular, $2.00. B. McCarty & Sons, straight, $1.55; circular, $1.85.

WHAT A "NOIVE" SOME FOLKS HAVE

Wealth Appearing Suddenly in Poor Man's Court Caused Something of a Riot

New York, May 15.—Wealth appearing suddenly today in poor man's court, caused a riot. A lawyer stooped and picked up a two carat blue white diamond set in platinum. He had stepped upon it. He handed it to the judge.

"A funny place," said he, "for a thing like that to be found. To whom does it belong?"

Three women in the rear of the room squealed "me." "What a noive some girls has got," piped a girl on the aisle. "What a noive—why me own Mike gave it to me last night. He saved up for three months to do it too."

"Says" yelled another girl in the threeshare suit, "you're lying like anything; it's me." Seven other women then claimed it and all started toward the judge. The court room was in an uproar. The bailiff shouted for order; the judge rapped for order, and two policemen tried to hold back the claimants of the ring. Reinforcements arrived and after fifteen minutes the court room was cleared.

The ring, valued at $1,500, was placed in the care of the clerk. At nightfall it had been claimed by twenty women.

"Can you describe it?" the clerk asked them.

"Yes," each replied. "It's a diamond."

Specialist Solves Baffling Problem

The Man Who Knew How Got Results, While Others Argued How to Do It.

"The twentieth century, the age of specialists!" As years succeed years, in this new and enlightened era, the saying because ever more strongly imbedded in the mind of the public, and a graphic illustration of the truth of the quotation was given on Charlotte street at about six o'clock last evening.

A lawyer suggested that it should be done this way. A prominent merchant suggested it be done that way. A clerk tried to do it another way; said the owner of the dog tried a method of his own. None of them worked and the crowd, divided in their opinion, stood and watched for—his specialist. He arrived, tried his method, and presto, the difficulty had been solved.

All at once over the greenhouse disposition of a bull terrier who suddenly snapped at an inoffensive, good natured Newfoundland dog who chanced to pass by. The owner of the terrier brought down a whip over the terrier's back, which immediately aroused its ire, and he sat on the Newfoundland dog's ear with the well-known bulldog's grip and began to slowly tear the ear from the body of his rightful owner.

Then it was that the lawyer suggested holding the terrier by the collar, and pulling the Newfoundland away by its tail. The only catch in the scheme was that the ear would stay with the terrier.

The merchant suggested choking the terrier, but the owner wouldn't see it that way, but tried a scheme of his own, such as is usually adopted by dog owners in a wild case, by pulling the boots to the other dog. His plan didn't work.

The clerk then told somebody to pry the terrier's jaws open with a stick, but no one volunteered, and there wasn't any stick.

Then along came the Specialist. He was driving a delivery team, and appeared suddenly today in poor man's court, caused a riot. A lawyer stooped and picked up a two carat blue white diamond set in platinum. He had stepped upon it. He handed it to the judge.
