

The Rossin House ...TORONTO...

TO Globe Trotters, the name "The Rossin"—the finest hotel in Ontario—has long stood a synonym of cosiness, home-like comfort and up-to-date luxury, attributes which are much advertised, and in reality possessed little by other pretentious houses.

While being the most centrally located of the Toronto hotels, it is happily remote from all the noise, dust and smoke of the railways, yet only two blocks from the Union Station up York Street, at its intersection with King Street, Toronto's historic and most fashionable promenade.

In capacity, "The Rossin" can comfortably accommodate 400 guests; fifty of its rooms having bathrooms attached.

As a protection against fire, it is built with brick partitions throughout. There are five stairways from the upper to the first floor, and nightly watchmen patrol the corridors, ensuring the perfect safety of guests.

An additional feature of the house is the absence of winding passages—all the hallways being attractively wide and lofty. In every respect, the architect, with an eye to safety, health and comfort, wrought on a generous scale. In fine, the house is, like its management, like its cuisine, like its patronage, the best and most modern in the city.

This hotel home, it will be known with no surprise, has numbered among its guests, at various times, members of the Royal family, of the nobility, and the leading men of the day.
