OTTAWA, Jan. 17.

The first fears respecting the losses by last night's fire are more than confirmed by an interview with Sanford Fleming. All the plans of the Pacific survey were burned except a tew in British Columbia. Intercolonial records and plans of surveys of the entire line were also destroyed. The entire loss is estimated at a million and a half of dollars. All of Fleming's private and official correspondence, for 15 years, is burned. A French man and his family lived in the building as caretakers. Ugly rumors are afloat, as to the building being purposely destroyed in the interests of those desirons of delaying the construction of the Pacific Railway, but no developments have been made. An investigation is demanded.
