ELECTION CAMPAIGNS

Without any attempt to place blame since proof cannot be obtained, comment should be made on a few incidents which took place during the recent election campaign.

The first several of these incidents occurred between 12 and 2 o'clock last Sunday morning. Sleepy students were kept or taken from bed by the telephone's ring only to have shouted at them "Vote for Zwicker." Until the students thought further on the subject, our new Council President had lost votes.

During the campaign, too, the election posters of all candidates were either torn down or defaced. In every case the damage was beyond that usually to be expected from what might be termed "casual maliciousness", which takes its toll in any election.

If these were the action of irresponsible third parties, they are no more than seems inevitable from a small, immature portion of any electorate. If they were unauthorized actions taken by a candidate's machine on his behalf, then better care should be taken in the selection of campaigners. If they were done with the full knowledge of any of the candidates, those responsible should at last admit their fault now, and remove the stigma from others.

The stunts, if such they were, were good publicity, but bad taste.
