Committee not told

These figures, Vary feels, undermine the basic premise of the Food Services Committee's proposal. "They (the committee) were not told of the interrelations in the budget, only of the $58,000 deficit, which they were told had to be made up somewhere. Students are already carrying their own weight. The money should be coming from other administrative departments."

The food services committee meets one week from this Friday to make a final decision on the proposal.

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR EXCELLENCE

No one can guarantee you excellence. All that anyone can expect is an opportunity to achieve excellence and that is what the co-registered B.Ed. program of the York Faculty of Education offers — an opportunity for you to become an excellent teacher.

How is this opportunity for excellence provided?

You will find that our three-year co-registered program brings the university and the schools into a unique partnership. You will have six months or more of practice teaching and will be placed in a classroom on a regular basis within two weeks of joining the program. You will be taught and supervised by Adjunct Professors who are highly skilled and respected master teachers on the staffs of schools affiliated with York's Faculty of Education, and by professors cross-appointed from other faculties at York. They work together with full-time Education faculty to ensure the best possible integration of theory and practice.

To learn more about York's co-registered B.Ed., drop into our Office of Student Programmes at N802, Ross Building and pick up our information brochure or telephone 667-6305 and ask us to send you a copy.
