BELA

"What can you do?" Mahooley de- | with a steaming bowl of rice.

"Any hard work."
"You don't look like one of these here Hercules."
"Ty me."

"Lord, man! said Mahooley.
"Don't you see me here twiddling my thumbs? What for should I hire anybody? To twiddle 'em for me, may "You'll have a crowd here soon," persisted Sam. "Four men on their way in to take up land, and others following. There's a surveying gang coming up the river, too."

"Moreover, you ain't got good sense," Mahooley went on. "Comin' to a country like this without an outfit. Not so much as a chaw of bacon, or a blanket to lay over you nights. There ain't no free lunch up north, kid. What'll you . do if I don't give you a

"Go to the company," returned Sam. "Go to the company?" cried Ma-coley. "Go to hell, you mean. The company don't hire no tramps. That's military organization, that is. Their men are hired and broke in outside.

So what'll you do now?"
"I'll make out somehow," said Sam. There ain't no make out of it!' cried Mahooley, exasperated. ain't even got an axe to swing. There ain't nothin' for you but starve."

"Well, then, I'll bid you good day," said Sam, stiffly.

"Hold on!" shouted the trader. "I ain't done with you yet. Is that manners, when you're askin' for a job?"
"You said you didn't have anything," muttered Sam.

"Never mind what I said. I ast you what you were goin' to do. The badgered one began to bristle a ittle. "What's that to you?" he little, "What's asked, scowling.

"A whole lot!" cried Mahooley. "You fellows have no consideration. You're always comin' up here and starvin' on us. Do you think that's nice for me? Why, the last fellow left a little pile of white bones beside the trail on the way to my girl's house, after the coyotes picked him clean. Every time I go up there I got to turn my head the other way."

Sam smiled stiffly at Mahooley's humor

'Can you cook?" the trader asked. Sam's heart sank. "So-so," he said. "Well, I suppose I've got to let you cook for us and for the gang that's comin'. You'll find everything in the kitchen across the road. Go and get acquainted with it. By gad; you can be thankful you run up against a softhearted man like me.'

Sam murmured an inquiry concerning wages.

"Wages!" roared Mahooley, with an outraged air. "Stiffy, would you look at what's askin' for wages! Go on, man! You're damned lucky if you get of grub every day. Grub comes high up here!

Sam reflected that it would be well to submit until he learned the real situation in the setlement. "All right," he said, and turned to go.

"Hold on," cried Mahooley. "You ain't ast what we'll have for dinner." Sam waited for instruction

"Well, let me see," said Mahooley. He tipped a wink in his partner's direction. "What's your fancy, Stiffy?"

Oh, I leave the mean-you to you, Mahooley.

Well, I guess you can give me some patty de foy grass, and squab on toast, and angel cake."

"Sure," said Sam. "How about a biscult Tortoni for dessert?"

"Don't you give me no lip!" cried Mahooley.

CHAPTER XVI.

On the fourth day thereafter the long tedium of existence in the settlement began to be broken in earnest. Before they could digest the flavor of one event, something else happened. In the afternoon word came down to Stiffy and Mahooley that the bishop had arrived at the French mission, bringing the sister of the company trader's wife under his care.

Likewise the Indian agent and the doctor had come to the police post. The whole party had arrived on horseback from the Tepiskow Lake district, where they had visited the Indians Their boat was held up down the lake by adverse winds.

Before Stiffy and Mahooley had a chance to see any of these arrivals or hear their news, quite an imposing caravan hove in view across the river from the store, and shouted lustily for drawn by a good team, beside half a dozen loose horses. The horses were in condition, the wagons well laden. The entire outfit had a well-to-do air that earned the traders' respect even from across the river. Of the four men, one carried his arm in a sling.

Stiffy and Mahooley ferried them across team by team in the scow they kent for the purpose. The four hard; and muscular travellers were men a cording to the traders' understanding. They used the same scornful, jocular, profane tongue. Their very nam recommendation: Big Jack Skinner Black Shand Fraser, Husky Marr, and Young Joe Hagland, the ex pugilist.

After the horses had been turned out to graze, they all gathered in the store for a gossip. The newcomers talked freely about their journey in. and its difficulties avoiding only a and its difficulties avoiding only a ceriain period of their stay at Nine Mile Point, and touching very briefly on their meeting with the bishop. Something sore was hidden there.

When the bell rang for supper they trooped across the road. The kitchen in reality consisted of a mess-room ownstairs with a dormitory over the actual kitchen was in a to behind. When the six men had seat ed themselves at the long trestle covered with ollcloth, the cook entered

Now, the cook had observed the new arrivals from the kitchen window, and had hardened himself for the meeting but the travellers were unprepared. They stared at him, scowling An odd silence fell on the table.

Mahooley looked curiously from one to another. "Do you know him?" he demanded.

Big Jack quickly recovered himself. He banged the table, and bared his big yellow teeth in a grin.

"On my soul, it's Sammy!" he cried. "How the hell did he get here? Here's Sammy, boys! What do you know about that! Sammy, the White Slave!

A huge laugh greeted this sally. Sam set his jaw and doggedly went on bringing in the food.

bringing in the food.

"How are you, Sam?" asked Jack, with mock solicitude "Have you recovered from your terrible experience, poor fellow? My! My! That was an awful thing to happen to a good Mahooley, laughing and highly mys-tified, demanded: "What's the con, boys?"

"Ain't you heard the story?" asked Jack, withh feigned surprise. "How that poor young bo, was carried off by a brutal girl and kep' prisoner on an island? "Go - way!" cried Mahooley, delighted.

"Honest to God he was!" affirmed Jack.

Joe and Husky not being able to think of any original contributions of wit, rang all the changes on "Sammy, the White Slave!" with fresh burst of laughter Shand said nothing. He laughed harshly.

"Who was the girl?" asked Mahooley.
They told him.

"Bela Charley!" he exclaimed. The best-looker on the lake! She has the name of a man-hater."

"I dare say," said Jack, with a ser-ous air. "But his fatal beauty was ious air. too much for her. You got to hand it to him for his looks, boys," he added, calling general attention to the tightlipped Sam in his apron. "This here guy, Apollo, didn't have much on our

"A highly-colored version of the story followed. In it Big Jack and his mates figured merely as disinterested onlookers. The teller, stimulated by applause, surpassed himself. They could not contain their mirth. "Oh, Lord! Oh, Lord!" cried Mahooley "This is the richest 1 con-heard! It will never be forgotten!" gritting his teeth, and crushing down the rage that bade fair to suffocate him. He disdained to challenge Jack's equivocal tale. The laughter of one's friends is hard enough to bear sometimes, still, it may be borne with a concealed hate it stings like whips.

Sam was supposed to sit down at the able with them, but he would sooner have starved. The effort of holding

When finally he cleared away, Mahooley said: "Come on and tell us your side now."

"Go to hell!" muttered Sam, and walked out of the back door.
He strode up the road without knowing or caring where he was going. He was moved merely by the impulse to put distance between him and his Completely and terribly possessed by his rage, as youths are, he felt that it would kill him if he could not do something to fight his way out of the could be do? He couldn't even sleep be friends! out of doors because he lacked a blanket His poverty had him by the was staring at the buildings of the company establishment mounted on a ticus food. company establishment mounted on a tious 1000. Hitle hill. This was a mile from the French outfit. The sight suggested a possible way out of his difficulties. With an effort he collected his faculture.

With an effort he collected his faculture. ties and turned in.

The buildings formed three sides of a square open to a view across the bay. On Sam's left was the big ware-house: on the other side the store faced it, and the trader's house behind a row of neat palings, closed the top, All the buildings were constructed of squared logs, whitewashed. A lofty flagpole rose from the centre of the little square, with a tiny brass canpon at its base m saw the trader taking the air on his veranda with two ladies.

Don't say "Breakfast Food"-say "Shredded Wheat"-for while you no doubt mean Shredded Wheat, you may get one of those mushy porridges that are a poor substitute for the crisp, delicious shreds of baked whole wheat—that supply all the nutriment for a half day's work. Two Biscuits with milk or cream make a nourishing meal at a cost of a few cents.

Made in Canada.

neat fence, the gravel path, the flower-beds had a strange look in that coun-try. A keen feeling of homesickness attacked the unhappy Sam. As he ap-proached the veranda one of the ladies seemed vaguely familiar. She glided toward him with extended hand.

"Mr. Gladding!" she exclaimed. "So you got here before us. Glod to see you!" In a lower voice she added "I wanted to tell you how much l sympathized with you the other day, but I had no chance. So glad you got out of it all right. I knew from the out of it all right. I knew from the first that you were not to blame."

Sam was much taken aback He bowed awkwardly. What did the woman want of him? Her over-impressive voice simply confused him. While she detained him, his eyes were seek ing the trader.

"Can I speak to you?" ne asked. The other man rose. "Sun aid. "Come into the house." "Sure!"

said. "Come into the house."

He led the way into an office, and, turning, looked Sam over with a quizzical smile. His name was Gilbert Beattie, and he was a tall, lean, black Scotchman, in equal parts good-natur ed and grim.
"What can I do for you?" he asked

"Give me a job," replied Sam abrupt-y. "Anything."

ly. "Anything."
"Aren't you working for the French "For my keep. That will never get me anywhere. I might as well be in

"Sorry," said Beattie. "This place is run in a different way. 'The Service,' we call it. The young fellows are indentured by the head office and sent to school, so to speak. I can't hire any body without authority You should have applied outside.' Sam's lip curled a little. A lot of good it did telling him that now.

"You seem to have made a bad start all around," Beattle continued, meaning it kindly. "Running away with that girl, or whichever way it was. That is hardly a recommendation to an employer.' "It wasn't my fault!" growled Sam, desperately. "Come now," said Beattie, smiling. "You're not going to put it off on the girl, are you?'

Sam bowed, and made his way out of the house. As he returned down the path he saw Miss Mackall leaning on the gatepost, gazing out toward the sinking sun over Beaver Bay. There was no way of avoiding her.

She started slightly as he came be hind her, and turned the face of a surprised dreamer. Seeing who it was, she broke into a winning smile, surprised play was lost on Sam, because he was not looking at her.
"It's you!" murmured Miss Mac-

"It's you!" murmured all. "I had lost myself." kall. Sam endeavored to sidle around the gate. She laid a restraining hand upon it.

"Wait a minute," she said. want to speak to you. Oh. it's nothing at all, but I was sorry I had no chance the other day. It seemed to me as I looked at you standing there alone, that you needed a friend!" "A friend!"-the word released spring in Sam's overwrought breast. For the first time he looked full at her with warm eyes. God knew he needed a friend if ever a young man

Miss Mackall, observing the effect of her word, repeated it. "Such a humiliating position for a manly man to be placed in!" she went on. grin; but when it rings with scarcely Sam's heart expanded with gratitude

"That was kind of you," murmured.

It did not occur to him that her position against the gatepost was carefully studied, that the smile was cloying, and that behind the inviting friendliness of her eyes lay the anxiety of a woman growing old. It was enough that she offered him kindness, Both the gift and the giver scemed beautiful. "There is a bond between us!" she went on, half coquettish, half serious.

I felt it from the first moment I saw you. Arriving together as we did, in it would kill him if he could not do something to fight his way out of the hateful position he was in. But what I are not like these people. We must out of doors because he lacked a blanket His poverty had him by the circles.

He came to himself to find that he somewhere within, was a dim consoners.

mitory

Events still followed fast at the settlement. Next morning a native came in to Stiffy and Mahooley's with the information that two york boats were coming up the lake in company One was enough to make a gala day Later came word that they had landed at Grier's Point This was two miles Owing to the low water in the lake, laden boats could not come closer in. The first was the police boat, with supplies for the post and for the In-dian agent. The second carried the government surveyors, six strong, and forty hundredweight of implements

Presently the surveyors arrived at the store, making a larger party of white men than had ever be-fore gathered on Caribou Lake. The natives were in force also. Seeming to spring from nowhere, they gathered in quite a big crowd outside the store and peered through the windows at their

Within, a great gossip was in pro gress. Especially was the story of Sammy, the White Slave, told and retold, amid uncontrollable laughter. At dinner-ttime they adjourned to the kitchen in a body to have a look at the hero or victim of the tale, according to the way you looked at it. It was considered that Sam did not take the observations. take the chaffing in very good part, but they had to confess that he fed them adequately.

As soon afterward as riding horses As soon afterward as riding horses could be secured, the whole party, excepting the traders, rode off around Beever Bay. The government land was to be laid off on the other side, and Big Jack and his pals were looking for locations there. As Graves, the chief surveyor, was mounting his horse, Mahooley said to him casually: "How about freighting your outfit

"Oh, that's all arranged for," was Mahooley shrugged, supposing that the company had secured the contract outside.

When the excitement of the departure died away, Mahooley for the first time perceived a squat little figure in a blanket capote sitting patiently on the platform in front of the store.

"Musa'cosis!" he exclaimed. "Blest if I didn't overlook you in the shuffle. How did you come?"

"Graves bring me in his boat," Musa'cosis answered.

Musq'oosis answered. "Come on in."
"I come get trade for my rabbit-skin robe."

"Sure, what'll you have?"
"Sure, what'll you have?"
"W'at you got?"
"Damn little. Take your choice."
##fer due observance on both sides of the time-honored rules of bargain Ing, the matter was concluded, and Musqoosis made a feint of gathering ap his bundles. As a matter of fact, the ld man had not yet reached what he had come for.

"What's your hurry?" said Mahooley.

"Sit down and talk a while."

This was not pure friendliness on the trader's part. He had a particular reason for wishing to cultivate the old Indian.

Musq'oosis allowed himself to "Where's Bela?" asked Mahooley.

"Home."
"What's all this talk about her carrying off the cook?"
Musq'oosis shrugged. "Fellas got

"Well, what are the rights of the

"I don't know," he returned, indif-erently. "I not there. I guess I go recently. "I not there. I guess I go see Beattie now."
"Sit down," said Mahooley. "What do you want to see Beattie for? Why don't you trade with me? Why don't you tell all the Fish-Eaters to come here? They do what you tell them."

"Maybe," said Musq'oosis, "but we always trade with Beattle." "Time you made a change then

He thinks he got you cinched."

"Gilbert Beattie my good friend."

"Hell! Ain't I your friend, too?

You don't know me. Have a cigar.

Sit down. What do you want to see Beattie about in such a rush?"

"I goin' buy team and wagon." said "I goin' buy team and wagon," said Musqoosis, calmly.
Mahooley laughed.
going to do with it?
of you as a driver."

"What are you

'I goin' hire driver," asserted Musq. "I sit down; let ot'er man me. So I get rich." oosis. "I sit down; let ofter man work for me. So I get rich."
This seemed more and more humorous to Mahooley. "That's the right ticket," he said. "But where will you get the business for your team ? By way of answer Mus'oosis pro duced a folded paper from inquide the capote. Opening it, Mahooley read: This is to certify that I have awarded the Indian Musq'oosis the contract to freight all my supplies from Grier's Point to my camp on Beaver Bay during summer at twenty-five cents per

Richard Grayes,
Dominion Surveyor.
(To be continued.)

RELIEF AT LAST

I want to help you if you are suffering from bleeding, itching, blind or protruding Pies. I can tell you how, in your own home and without any-one's assistance, you can apply the best of all treatments.

PILES TREATED AT HOME

I promise to send you a FREE trial of the new absorption treatment, and references from your own locality if you will but write and ask. I assure you of immediate relief. Send no money but tell others of this offer.

MRS. M. SUMMERS, Box 8, Windsor, Ont.

HARBOR OF GALWAY.

Is Ancient Irish City to Be Rejuvenated?

The anno incement that the corpora tion of Dublin has urged the British Government to create a great harbon at Galway to deal with Canadian and American trade gives rise to the hope hat the day is not far distant the ancient glories of that historic mart may be revived. A war goo-graphy bulletin prepared by the National Geographic Society says:

"Galway is the capital of Galway county, where the River Shannon flows. It is situated on Galway Bay, in a direct line west from Dublin, 2,385 miles from Boston and 2,700 miles from New York. On his re-markable map Ptolemy marked Galway Bay, calling it Ausoba. To day it contains not more than 15,000 inhabitants, emigration to America having sadly depleted the population. "In the 'Ogygia of O'Flaherty' we read: 'Gailleamh, daughter of lasting Breasail, bathed in the full cold stream, when the bright branch was drowned. For her the River Gaillima is named.' And thus we named the town which has stood on the banks of this small stream from time imme morial. Traditionally known as Ballinsruanc, the name Gillimh be-came in the mouths of the Norman settlers 'Galvir'—hence Galway.

"An attempt to compass in brief neighborhood must end in failure. For enturies it was in a ferment of land obbery, pillage and fanaticism begdescription. Centuries before garing the Christian era the Carthaginians and Romans traded with the descend ants of a still earlier period. Tighe speaks of one Partholanus, a Scythian settling in Ireland 'some centuries after the flood,' and 'dying divided the country into four parts, assigning one to each of his four sons.' They were dispossessed by the Firbolgians. Con and Eoghan made a partition in A. D. 'In these partitions the cities of Dublin and Galway were the termini of one or the other lines of divisions. "In the ninth century the town suf fered from the ravages of the Danes, and for 100 years following 1171 the de Burgos, the O'Connors and the O'Fla hertys were engaged in a battle-royal for the possession of the surrounding territory, the house of O'Connor being wiped out in 1316.

"In 1473 the town was burned. Beween 1651 and 1660 Galway was the CONVEX LENS OF THE EYE. of religious warfare, and down to 1793, the zeal of Protestant Catholic made living a delightfully exciting time, while the man who died peacefully in his bed left to his relatives the legacy of social ostra-cism. With the advent of the English into Galway at the close of the twelfth century it became an important commercial and military centre, and the Galwegian basbleu of to-day traces his ancestry back to one of those families embalmed in the local

'Athy, Blake, Bodkin, Deane, Datcy, Lynch,

Jyce, Kirwan, Martin, Morris, Sher-ret, French,' known ar the "Tribes of Galway.'

"Heley Dutton, writing in 1823, speaks of the ruins of several abbeys in the vicinity of Galway erected beween the fifth and thirteenth turies, which are worth visiting, and pecause of Spain's ancient commercial relations with this port a trace of Spanish influence may be discovered in some of the old buildings. A traveller of eighty years ago wrote that at every second step I saw something to recall Spain to my recollection— the wide entries and broad stairs of Cadiz and Malaga,' but a more recent visitor, W. B. Blake, found few relics of the past, 'only numeries thrive in this shrunken capital of the west that once traded with all the world and rang with the wit and oath and commerce of French and Spanish captains.' There is still to be seen Lynch castle, with its sculptured monkeys from the window of which Jamts Lynch Fitzstephen, Mayor of Galway in hanged his own son with his own hands for the treacherous murder of a Spanish nobleman on account of jealousy.

plan of establishing a transatlantle line between Galway and New York was projected and came so near to realization that at said one ship made the voyage, only to finish dis-astrously on the rocks at the entrance to the harbor, while another ship destined for that route was burned on the American side. There were ugly rumors afloat at the time that the pilots who took the first ship in had been bribed by rival interests to pilots who took the first ship in work her destruction. However that may be, for many years thereafter there was a superstition in Galway that an evil genius was on the look-out to prevent the perfection of this plan.

"But evil genii and superstitions are being blown away by the great European war, and Galway is aroused to the importance of taking her stand in the commercial high-noon of the twentieth century, though perhaps without anticipating that degree of prosperity which in the olden time gave birth to such luxury as to shock the city council into ordaining:

'No young man, prentiz or otherwise, shall weare ne gorgious apparel, ne silks, either within or without ther garments, ne yet fyne knit stockins, either of silkeor other costile wise (nor 'pant wofles'—pant oufles, but be content with showse.

YOUR MENTAL MACHINE.

Shut Off Its Power at Night After a Day's Hard Work.

It is a great thing to learn-to shut off the mental steam when you quit work. What would you think of a factory manager who would leave all of his power turned on after the opera-tors had left the factory, the delicate machinery running everywhere, pounding itself to pieces, grinding out its delicate bearings without produc-ing anything?

Many of us do not turn off our mental power after we are through pre-ducing or creating for the day. We carry our business home, take it to bed with us, think, plan, worry and waste precious energy in all sorts of ways, in superfluous thinking, foolish worrying that produces nothing, but grinds out the exquisite mental machinery and unfits it for the next day's work. It is a great art to learn to shut off power when through our day's work, so that we can oil our mental ma-chinery, refresh our minds and recuperate ourselves, so that we can go to the next day's work completely reinvigorated.

Many men seem to think that they are accomplishing something if they keep their minds on business even when not at work, but they really accomplish less than nothing because they are wasting precious mental energy, the power for concentration, the vigor, the focusing of the mind, which is imperative for creating purposes.—Orison Sweet Marden.

Handicapped by His Name.

The handicapped by His Name.

The handicap of a poet's name was illustrated in the case of Mr. William Wordsworth, who was the eldest surviving grandson of the poet. Mr. Wordsworth was a great scholar and a poet himself of high distinction. A volume of his sonnets was issued privately some years ago. On account of the similiarity of his name with that of his grand-father, he always refused to publish any of his poetical writings, though pressed to do so by the people on such high authority as Matthew Arnold, who described one of the sonnets as the finest in the English language.—Montreal Star.

A Burning Glass That Adjusts the Sight to Varying Distances.

One of the manifold wonders of the human eye is the convex tens with which the focal distances of sight are made instantly and without mental effort. This lens in the eye is a literal "burning glass," as may be shown by the simplest of experiments. Let the person at midday hold a straw against the face of the sun and focus his eyes on the straw. He can look at the straw, with its back-ground of a dazzling sun, and without discomfort. But the moment he looks at the fiery ball of the sun itself subconsciously the lens of the eye comes to its proper focus, with the result that a "burning" sun spot appears on the retina of the eye, and it is said that few seconds of such looking would burn out the retina as it by fire itself.

In the subconscious adaptability of the eve lens to adopt itself to different distances lies its value to the human sight. The man with a camera adjusts the focus of his lens by sliding them forward and back. The lenses of the human eye, by chang-ing their curvatures, allow of one looking at fine print six inches from his nose and in a fraction of a second to look up and away, probably fifty miles to a mountain peak that in an instant is in true camera focus Pittsburgh Press

KNOW THE CAR'S LOAD.

Method by Which a Motorist Can Get the Best Tire Service.

"Perhaps the greatest and most important thing a motorist should know about a car is its weight with the average load carried," says an expert.
"By knowing the weight of his car when loaded ready to run the motorist is in a position to regulate his tires so that they not only act as the best shock absorber -btainable, but are fit to offset any injuries which may come from over or under inflation.

"With the weight of the car known. when preparing for a trip which includes passengers it is very easy for the motorist to regulate his air pressure in the tires so that they will run with the least injury to themselves. This foresight will also prevent a break in the side walls caused by an overload.

"With the weight of your car, plus with the weight of gasoline, water and extra tires, with the weight of the passengers added, you have the total running weight of your car.

"For a quick way of determining what air pressure you will carry in your tires if you have no regular cable of inflation the following table is sug-

"For three and one-half-inch tires divide the weight by forty. "For four-inch tires divide the weight of the loa by forty-eight. "For four and one-half-inch tires di-weight of the load by thirty-two.

weight of the load by sixty-four.
"For five and one-half-inch tires divide the weight of the load by seventy-two.

vide the weight of the load by fifty-further illustrate the working out of the above table suppose your car weighed 2,880 pounds and you are using four-inch tires. From the above we find that for four-inch tires the weight of the load should be divided by forty-eight. This will give you sixty pounds air pressure, which should be carried in your tires. The tire mileage will be greatly increased if the motorist will regulate his air pressure by the load he carries.

STUDY AND EXERCISE

Overstudy and lack of exercise make Overstudy and lack of exercise make thin bloodless children. Study does not usually hurt a child at school unless the studies encroach on time that should be spent in out-of-doors exercise. But lack of exercise and overstudy is a combination that brings on St. Vitus dance. If your boy or girl at school is thin and pale, listless and institutive, has a fickle annetite. 'a at school is thin and pass, listess and inattentive, has a fickle appetite, 's unable to stand still or sit still, you must remember that health is much more important than education, and more time should be given to exercise and recreation.

and recreation.

See to it at once that the child does not overstudy, gets plenty of out-of-door exercise, sleeps ten out of every twenty-four hours, and takes a safe, reliable tonic like Dr. Williams' Pink Pills until the color returns to the cheeks and lips and the appetite becomes normal. For growing children who become pale and thin Dr. Williams Pink Pills are not only safe, but in most cases are the very best tonic that can be taken. These gills build up the blood, strengthen the nerves and assist nature in keeping pace with rapid growth.

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail postpaid at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. See to it at once that the child does