The Everyday Bargain Store

IF YOU PATRONIZE

Present and Future Prices

Merchants as well as the buying public are watching with real amazement the steady upward growth of prices. They can see that this growth seems to be a matter of increases in everything except in production—for there is simply not the merchandise to be had to supply the demand for it. Rising prices together with shortage should, we think, interest careful men and women. Supply your wants at this time, for we have no assurance whatever that we will be able to offer such a price for the same quality of merchandise again.

TO ORGANIZE BRANCH G.W.V.A.

All Local Returned Soldiers are Asked to Meet for Organization Next Wednesday

An endeavour is being made to organize in Hartland and district a branch of the Great War Veterans' Association, and the plan is likely to carry through forthwith. Private S. G. Barter has the matter in hand and yesterday he called at the office to say that he had received word from the secretary of the Provincial Council at St. John, who had informed him that the necessary forms and material for starting the branch would at once be forwarded from the Dominion command at Ottawa. It is expected that by the middle of the coming week everything will be in order and every returned soldier in Hartland and vicinity is urged to attend a meeting at Hartland on next Wednesday evening. Mr. Barter points out that it is very important that as many of the old comrades get together as possible, for that from the very start the branch may be successful.

Concerning the visit of the Prince of Wales to St. John, P.E. Barter submits the following for publication: "Tomorrow the Prince of Wales will be at St. John, and what a history day it will make of Aug. 15, 1919. He will get a great welcome from all the people, but most specially from the returned soldiers, for the Prince was one of the boys on the western front in France and Belgium, as well as having served with the British Expeditionary Forces in Italy. Some people may think that the Prince of Wales was a mere belletrist, but the returned soldiers know that he has seen and taken his share of the danger and peril of the battlefield. It is common knowledge that once on the front in France he had his motor car stopped while he went up as a small hill to make observations and a shell smashed the car and killed the driver just as the Prince had stepped out.

"One of our own boys from this parish, while going with his battery in the early morning, saw the prince up in a hayloft in a shellshattered barn shying himself by a mirror hung on a rafter. He had bayonet hanging to his back where he had slept in this shelter as a common soldier would and was 'cleaning up' for the day. He was heartily cheered and waved his left hand in acknowledgement while his right hand continued to wield the razor. Again, he was among the Canadian soldiers and went by the name of Lieut. Windsor, unrecognized by the rank and file. He was having a great time with the boys when his identity leaked out and suddenly everyone was as still as a starched shirt-front. That night at a banquet given in his honor he said: 'Today I enjoyed myself and had a great time with the boys until by chance I was discovered to be the Prince of Wales and after that I had a pretty rotten time and had no good time at all.'

"When the Germans were full of the Prince and Gen. Birdwood were seen together well up in front advancing, riding from one division to another. This fellowship and the knowledge of the gallantry and quiet bravery of our Prince has endeared him to all of the returned men, and the boys will welcome him as one of our beloved and trusted comrades of the Great War. God bless the Prince of Wales! We know him so well he is recognized at once, anywhere.

Card of Thanks

I wish to express my sincere thanks to the friends at Long Settlement and Good Corner for their untiring efforts to make easy the long illness of my wife, and who at the time of her decease and funeral showed so much sympathy and kindness to me and to the children.

THE POTATO CROP

The present outlook for the potato crop is not so favorable as it was in July. The tops are taking on a stunted and yellowish appearance, due, some say, to the quality or the absence of potash in the fertilizer. The yield is not likely to be quite up to the average, although of course the out-turn is still altogether problematical. Some shippers will commence digging next week, but of course digging will not be very general for two or three weeks. No doubt some early-maturing Cobblers will be cleared earlier.

The following from the Fort Fairfield Review will apply for most part to conditions of the crop and to circumstances in Carleton and Victoria counties:

The writer has asked a great many farmers recently what the prospects are now for a crop of potatoes in Aroostook this fall. Of course the answers have varied much. A few have said that the yield will be very light, owing to the fact that there are so many poor pieces. The majority have said that the prospects are fair, some even being good and dead and many pretty poor. One big shipper says that, although a good many pieces are poor, the majority of the fields are good indeed, so that the prospects for a good crop are excellent right now. There are several reasons for the pooriness of some of the pieces, some had not enough fertilizer, some were on poor ground, some were set back a little by the frost, and some had not been handled properly in general, but the greatest cause is the bad quality of the fertilizer often used. The presence of borax with the potash in considerable of the fertilizer this season has apparently had a very bad effect on the seed and plants, sometimes killing the plant entirely but oftener rendering it very backward and weak. It is pretty hard lines for a farmer to pay nearly a hundred dollars a ton for fertilizer to ruin his potato crop with. It ought to be possible to ruin it more cheaply.

Thomas Travis, associate editor of Forest and Stream, the well known New York magazine, arrived in Hartland on Monday and with Prof. Watson was conveyed to the camp of the Miramichi Fishing Club by A. Plummer and was the guest of the club until today, when he returned and went to the Tobique. Later Forest and Stream is likely to contain something of supreme interest to disciples of Jack Watrous who know the Miramichi headwaters.
