"Climax Furnace" for Wood.

Is Admitted by All to be the Best Furnace in Every Way that can be Purchased in the Market.

The above Furnace with Radiator made wholly of heavy cast iron and CANNOT POSSIBLY CRACK BY EXPOSURE TO HEAT.

The Fire Box Dome, is made in one piece and heavily corrugated; thus giving it great strength and heat radiating surface, and so constructed that the joints cannot leak smoke, which is the great objection to every other Wood Furnace in use. The feed Door is large and will admit of burning all kinds of rough wood, which, with the Check Damper, controlling the fire, makes the Climax Furnace also the most economical. There being no thin plates or sheet iron used in its construction it will easily

Last for 20 Years Without Repairs.

I am prepared to contract for the heating of buildings at lowest possible rates for good work, and have secured the services of experienced workmen so that I can Fully Warrant every Furnace to give Complete Satisfaction.

If your Dealer cannot show you my Climax Furnace write direct to the Sackville Store Foundry for Description and Full make of cost.

AMHERST PRESS, Saturday: Yesterday afternoon, Albert Faulkner, between 17 and 18 years of age, son of Charles Faulkner of Devils Island, was out in his boat on the water beach and the Island, guiding him. He had just fired at a bird, and laid his gun down in the boat, when he lost his balance and fell overboard. He was seen from the Island, and a boat put off to his assistance, but he never came to the surface.

Mrs. GEORGE, of Amherst who with her husband the late Rev. Wm. George did much valuable missionary work in India for several years, has accepted an offer to go to Newton, Mass., to take charge of a new institution for young ladies preparing for missionary work in the east. The ladies will study theology at the Newton Theological Institution, and receive the necessary special teaching from Mrs. George who is employed by the women's department of the Baptist foreign mission board.

The annual exhibition of the Dorchester agricultural society was held at Memramcook on Tuesday of last week. Though the weather was cold and threatening rain there was a fair attendance of farmers and others from the surrounding country. The exhibits as a whole were superior to those of last year, especially so in live stock, the show of thoroughbreds being larger. Some very fine Polled Angus were exhibited by the Blacks and Taylors. The show of horses was also better. There was also a large number of dogs on exhibition, of medium size and shape. In fruit, vegetables and fancy work the display was about the same as last year.

Says the St. John Globe: Schooner "G. King," Capt. Thorne, was towed into the harbor yesterday full of water. She left River Hebert on Thursday for St. John with a cargo of deals, and when near dark went off the Cape, she commenced to leak. The water gained so fast that it was feared she would swamp. About seven o'clock she was brought to anchor near Black Point. By this time the cabin was full of water, and the men were forced to get on the deck. During all the storm the vessel was anchored with the water over her decks. The men covered themselves as best they could. The wind blew with fearful violence, and was accompanied with heavy rain. At daylight signals of distress were hoisted, and the tug "Neptune" went out and took hold of her. The men suffered a good deal from exposure. They were supplied with breakfast from by the captain of the tug. The schooner is now at Rodney Slip where her cargo is being discharged.

The lumber industry of Canada will find a check it is expected by the competition now offered by Newfoundland. A cargo of fine pine deals was landed in London not long since as a sample and according to the Timber Trade Journal will prove a paying investment so long as the present quantity can be maintained. It has been found that the island has a large quantity of good pine within its boundaries and the owners will have an advantage over their continental brethren in cheaper labor and smaller freights.

—Timothy O'Shea a young St. John man was drowned in New York last week.

Autumn Convocation.

A Pleasant Evening at Lingley Hall.

On Friday evening last, in response to invitations issued, a large audience assembled in Lingley Hall to listen to the inaugural address of Prof. Andrews and the first appearance upon the public platform before a Sackville audience, Dr. Inch in his introductory remarks paid a high tribute to the ability of Prof. Brecken, who had this year been added to the staff of professors, and ventured the hope that he might often be listened to from both the platform and pulpit.

Prof. Andrews took as his subject "The Vitality and Ethics of the Intellectual Life," and in opening dealt upon the mechanical elements of the intellectual life, as illustrated in the laws of motion and energy governing the vibrations of the ether in the essentially mechanical character of mathematical and logical reasoning, which may be expressed in physical symbols and worked out in calculating machines and the logical axioms; and then upon the non-mechanical character of the consciousness, which makes use of the mechanism, quoting the words of Lotze, "Universal is the extent, but everywhere subordinate is the function of mechanism."

Between these two is a set of faculties which lie between them, not altogether free from the laws of mechanics, yet not so mechanical as the reason, viz: the feelings—love of the beautiful and sublime of home, reverence and the power of waking to enthusiasm. These are the fertilizing elements of the mind, and it is upon these that the power is awakened by truth filtering through the imagination into the heart. When this has taken place truth becomes vital. No longer is any statement a mere statement, but it becomes a power in the heart. This is the truth which moves men; truth in that form has made history. Illustrations of the difference between truth in the purely intellectual, and truth which had become transfused with these vital elements, and had awakened the soul, were drawn from physics and botany.

To the study of the fruitfulness elements of the mental life and their laws, the name "Vitalism" was given.

The second part of the lecture, dealing with the ethics of the mental life, was treated under the following heads:—The love of truth for truth's sake; reverence for all God's revelations; and the obligation of service.

The fundamental element in all ethics is righteousness and justice, and these elements were exhibited as phases of justice.

To think wrongly of a person or fact is an injustice. He who wishes to do no wrong will be a truth seeker. This spirit shows itself in the man's conduct in business, politics, and in the public man who will seek in politics, "the truth" not "Will it help our side?"

The orator will seek to speak the truth and not what will dazzle the crowd, and will applaud the man who will seek to speak the universal truth, not merely the denominational theology. To show a reverence for God's revelations, especially in nature, is justice because they are worthy and deepest reverence is due to them.

Under the last head the attempt was made to show that common sense taking its stand upon the fundamental facts of social life and the rights of men as a whole, is the only basis of justice in the demand in the way of self sacrifice and service for the sake of others is simply a claim of justice.

In the value of property men receive from the world more than they give. The value of land is a gift from the community. Men ought to pay for what they get. Rich men and others who fasten on the community and return nothing, wrong the community. The wealthy, when they endow institutions for young men preparing for missionary work in the east, are performing acts of charity by justice, and are striving to go to the grave free from the charge of being thieves and robbers.

The same applies more strongly to the case of the educated men, who use their education for selfish aggrandizement, and do not feel that their advantages, and the reverence of the community, are theirs by right.

The souls of the past and social conditions of the present put them under obligations to serve their fellow-men. One man ought to be for the people. College men in crises of the world's history have not been wanting. Great needs are calling them now. The only righteousness is found in love. For a wealthy man to profess and students the supreme truth is this: "Nothing is righteous but sacrifice, nothing is honest but love. Love is the fulfilling of the law."

Port Elgin.

—The recent wet weather has done no little damage to farm crops in this locality. Potatoes are rotting in the ground and nothing can be done to prevent it. Hay will be scarce in some localities. Much of the broadleaf hay is still uncut and tons of it can be seen rotting in the water between the two here and Baie Verte. It is hard work to get other crops housed owing to the unfavorable state of the weather.

—Mr. J. L. Black, Sackville, is shipping 30 cars of deals at Brooklyn. They came to this port by rail.

The general grocery and dry goods business of Mr. M. Murray will shortly be extended by the entrance into the firm of a partner, who brings with him besides capital, a thorough knowledge of the requirements of the business.

—Eggs are being handled in large quantities by our local merchants. They report that while the McKinley bill has stood for the present, the shipments of eggs to England have proved as profitable, and that the Americans will want our hen fruit at any cost in the near future. Among the heaviest dealers is Mr. Murray, who has now in his warehouse 57 thirty dozen cases and 20 barrels of about 90 dozen, all ready for shipment. The farmers in the vicinity can testify as to the value thereon of eggs, and the fact that each farmer keeps 25 birds and the eggs bring 17 cents per dozen.

—Our fair came off on Saturday last, and after a very successful day, the fair was over, the citizens were treated to one which, from a humorous point of view, was far more entertaining. It consisted of several rain and boys from the surrounding country, all somewhat under the influence of the weather, repaired to a yard near E. C. Gooden's residence, where they were to have a "rain" or "water" fight. Everybody wanted to fight, and no sooner would a man announce his intention to clean out everybody, than he would be assailed by a shower of water, which would be turned to soap and suds. This was kept up for an hour or so, during which the yard resembled a mine of squirming eels, when a shower sprang up and the party adjourned to the hotel to cool off.

Dorchester.

—The restoration of Trinity church interior is now so far advanced that the church will be reopened on Sunday with special services. The improvements effected in the building are very great. Twelve new Gothic windows have been placed in position, composed of cathedral glass with figured headings, the frames of which were manufactured in Oxford and the glass in Montreal. A basement has been excavated, and a large furnace placed therein, thus insuring a comfortable temperature in future. The entire church has been re-pewed, the altars, which were also made in Oxford, being of ash, in a very handsome and comfortable design, and adding immensely to the appearance of the church, as well as to the comfort of the sitters. Lady Smith has provided a beautiful memorial pulpit of brass and oak in memory of her late husband, at a cost of $450, as well as a massive stone font at a cost of $150. Mr. and Mrs. David Chapman have placed in the chancel an exceedingly handsome stained-glass window, also in memory. Warden Foster has presented two large cornucopas of six lights each, which will be ample to light the nave, and which are copied after that already placed in the chancel by the ladies Guild. The call for subscriptions has been readily responded to by the congregation, the chief subscribers being Mr. H. W. Palmer, $500, Mrs. Chandler $100 besides very many smaller sums ranging from $5 to $50, and the gifts have been described. The total cost of the work already done will be about $1600, besides which it is proposed in the spring to re-plate and paint the building and put in new doors, and a stained window above the main entrance. In addition to the work on the church, the Sunday school building has been much improved by new and comfortable seats modelled somewhat after railway car seats, and which are a great advance on the stiff benches formerly in use. Much credit is due the Rector, Mr. Campbell, for the energy he has displayed in the work of improvement to which he has given his supervision. The plans for the work were furnished gratuitously by his son, Mr. W. F. Campbell, of King's College Windsor, and are a good evidence of his skill as a designer and draughtsman. The work has all been done under the supervision and management of Mr. J. F. Teed, Contractor which is a sufficient guarantee of its substantial character.

—Accident at Dorchester Copper Mine.—On Saturday, Wm. Ross and Geo. F. W. Wry were working in the blacksmith shop attached to the Copper Mine works, when a spark from the fire dropped into a keg of powder standing near, exploding. Both the men were severely injured. Wry's clothes were torn off him by the force of the explosion and his condition is critical. Seven bags of powder were in an adjoining closet close by, but fortunately were not affected.

LIBERAL CONSERVATIVE CONVENTION.—The annual meeting of the Liberal Conservative Association will be held at Port Elgin on Thanksgiving day, Nov. 6th. Delegates have been appointed from the different county associations, and a large attendance is expected. Special rates will be given to delegates over the I. C. R. and N. B. & P. E. I. Railway.

Maritime Agriculturist.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN.

Since my retirement from the management of the Post, I have seen only one copy of the Maritime Agriculturist, published by Robert Jarvis Gilbert. That copy, which was handed me last week, contained what the publisher styled "An Emphatic Denial," of the fact that I hold a lien on his paper. If Mr. Gilbert had called the article in question "An Emphatic Lie," he would have been nearer the mark, for, unless he has a remarkably short memory, he must have known when he penned his "denial" that he was writing an unqualified falsehood. It is probable that if Mr. Gilbert had known that my lien was on record and had been published by commercial agencies, he would not have placed himself on record as he has done; but my present object is not to make a study of his peculiar moral and mental characteristics. I merely wish to warn all persons interested not to be misled by Mr. Gilbert's "Emphatic Denial," and to assure them that if my lien is not satisfied, such persons as rely upon Robert Jarvis Gilbert's statements and pay him or his assignee, may be called upon hereafter to pay me.
