Immortality.

's they are looking down upon us, Loved ones who have gone be n a world of light and glory Do they love us as of yore? Are the bright eyes, closed in slux Oped and gazing from on high, caming with a clearer vision; Watching o'er us, yea, for aye?

Do they know our thoughts and feel Do they mourn when we are temp Are they watching, are they waiting,
For the coming of our feet?
Will the same fend heats to ceive us

Who shall say they are not with us? Men of science and of lore, Can you tell us, with your wisdom As you o'er your volumes pore, If the heavens are far beyond us-Or a region all around us,
Where God's messengers of love

Are uplifting human creatures, Better to sustain their burdens, Better yet to know His power? Or is it a world of glory, All divided from our own Where no influence can mingl

With the trials earth hath known? Oh, for hope that comes to gladden ! Oh, for faith that doth assure That our loved ones have not left us, Though immortal now, and pure, They are still beside us walking Though unseen by mortal eye; They are working in his vineyard They are with the Father nigh
