The Model Hostess.

A woman may possess wealth untold, she may have the kindest of hearts and the brightest of minds, but unless she has absolute control of her feelings there will be some time in her career as hostess that she will display annoyance or flurry, and the contagion spreading to the guests, will cause an otherwise successful entertainment to die out in undisguised failure. A model hostess must to all appearances be made of good humor so far as disagreeable happenings are concerned. Even though a guest or a careless waiter inadvertently breaks a bit of china which can never be replaced, she must smile as though the loss of the entire set would but emphasize the pleasure of the evening. Her well bred calm inspires her guest with a feeling of confidence, and though in her heart she may be dubious about certain important details of here dinner, if she does not show her anxiety, everything will pass off to a happy conclusion. A flurried hostess or a nervous host, whose countenance but sadly couceals the worry felt, can do more toward making the guests uncomfortable than if the soup were served stone cold and the salad dressing were ruined by a too bountiful application of vinegar. An imperturbable calm and a ready tact are the two important factors in the making of a model hostess. Secure these and you need never fear for the success of any of your entertainments.-New York

In Preserving Fruit, Remember

The richest and most delicate flavors cannot be produced with inferior fruit or sugar; neither from the choicest kinds unless proper methods, vessels and utensils

Sugar is used in canning to impart more delicious flavor to the fruit, and has no "keeping power." The thorough expulsion of the air, and jars and rubbers so perfect that it cannot force its way in are what "keeps" it.

It is better to pare with a silver knife, for fruit will sometimes discolor before it can be finished and dropped in

The skins of peaches and plums may be easily removed by pouring boiling water over the fruit, but only a few should be taken at a time, and they should almost immediately be plunged in cold water to prevent softening.

The pits of cherries and peaches and the cores of pears impart a richness and delicacy of flavor that cannot be obtained in any other way.

There is more pectine (gelatinous mat-Do You Think of Building ter) around the cores and skins of all kinds of fruit than in any other part, and in making jelly neither should be discard-

FRIENDLESS COYOTE

TRICKS OF HIS ENEMIES TO MAKE MONEY OUT OF HIM.

on the Same Set of Scalps-In Spite of Wholesale Killing, the Pest Does Not

The one friendless, hunted Ishmaelite of the plains, against whom is every man's hand, is the prairie wolf-the coyote. If he is adapted to any sphere of usefulness on earth, nobody has yet been shrewd enough to find it out; if he has ever done a respectable deed, it has not yet come to light. The jack rabbit savory stew in case of need, the buffalo covered a method of utilizing any pormouth to his ragged tail—except as a fertilizer. The short grass country is gray, hairlike vegetation that is called pasture blends with the dirty coat of the vandal. Through it he sneaks and runs, now a gaunt figure on the horizon, now an ungainly shape near at hand. ways with a criminal aspect, as if he had just done something to be ashamed of or was contemplating a deed of the sort at the earliest opportunity. Once the coyote had the whole Indian Territory to himself. He could snarl and fight to his heart's content, and there was none to say him nay. But when the lands were opened to settlement and a family took its place on every quarter section there was less room for the wild creatures of the plains who had before been undisturbed. Then the coyote had to go out among men, and he found that he was a very unpopular imthat he favored with his presence. And he earned the right to so be considered honestly. He robbed the sheepfolds, stole the chickens and made the traveler afraid—all without any equivalent in service. Furthermore, he is essentially a coward. The men of the frontier have a sort of respect for the brave creature that defies them or for the cunning one that outwits them, but they can never forgive the trembling one that is alarmed at their very appearance. So, from the farmer's son who blazes away with his old shotgun at the prowling coyote behind the barn to the city sportsman who wastes a cartridge intended for a prairie chicken or duck in ending the life of a wolf trotting along the hedgerow, there is a ceaseless, unrelenting war waged against the luckless wanderer. Since the immigration of the wolves from the territory into the farming and stock raising states to the north there has been more than a desultory warfare. The farmers have banded together to protect the flocks and herds and have offered generous bounties for the scalps of the creatures, a proceeding that has resulted in the slaughter of thousands. Yet the supply seems none the less, and all the sharpshooting is but a waste of powder and balls. Year after year there are reported from 1,200 to 1,500 sheep killed in Nebraska and Kansas by wolves, and the hundreds of dollars spent for bounties have produced little diminution of the plague.

Sometimes the bounties are not what they are purported to be. The people of a western county found once that they payment of this sort of expense and that certain hunters were buying new farms out of the proceeds of their prow ess on the plains. An examination fol-lowed, and it was found that there was in existence an endless chain in compar ison with which the greenbacks and gold reserve make but a feeble showing At the rear of the county clerk's office, where the redeemed scalps were thrown, was a convenient opening in the wall, and through this the scalps were pulled in the night, to be presented at the counter in the morning for another bounty of $8 each. It was estimated that the county had paid for one set of scalps not less than 12 times, and the emptiness of the treasury was explained. The saddest part of the happening was that the schemers saw the investigators at the hole and became bounty jumpers at once—jumping the county for safer climes.

Another curious circumstance was noticed by the officers of two counties adjoining in central Kansas. The officers of one were paying out money every day for wolf scalps while the others seldom had any demands for the reward Each of the hunters was compelled to swear that he had killed the wolf inside the boundaries of the county where the scalp was presented, and there was no reason for doubting the truth of the testimony. But what could be the reason of the disparity in the claims? One day a settler's son was questioned: "Where did you kill this wolf?" "Down near the edge of the county." "Are coyotes very thick there?" "Well, rather, though not so thick as they are farther south."

"Over in the other county?" "Yes, there are more there." "But they do not kill any there Why is it?" "The other county only pays $1 for scalps and this pays $2. So we drive them over the line before we shoot

The county officers at once readjusted the scale of rewards. - Chicago Times-
