It is stated that the British Government have, in accordance with a resolution of the United States Congress, been notified that

Mr. Trevelyan stated in the House of Commons recently that in view of the action of the New York Emigration Commissioners the deportation of destitute emigrants from Ireland would be discontinued. Mr. Trevelyan stated in the Imperial House of Commons on Friday that of one thousand emigrants sent to America only two tamilies had been inmates of a work-house, and those had received pecuniary assistance and were doing well. A very important measure has been passed by the Imperial Parliament entitled the Em proyers' Liability Act. It is a curious fact that when Ireland had a Parliament of her own she passed similar legislation in the year The committee of the House of Lords finds that the emigration clauses of the lrish Land Act have failed, that the modes of valuation of land are unreliable, the relations between landlords and tenants have not improved, and that the tenants have become demoralized, and maintain the hope that agitation will bring about the passage of a new Act. A few evenings ago Mr. Parnell was seen wandering about the lobbies of the House of Commons with a big box in his hands. Whenever he met a friend he would pause, show him the box, and give him something from it. Curiosity was excited amongst those not thus favoured to know what the box contained, and speculation was rife as to what form of dynamite cartidges was being distributed among the members of the third party. At last the secret came out. The box was full of peaches, big, luscious American peaches, which had been sent to the Irish leader by his brother John, who is reputed to have one of the largest orchards in the world. In the Commons on Mon ay Mr. Gladstone, in reply to Sir Stafford Northcote. said he had received a letter from Mr Brad-laugh announcing his intention of taking his seat in spite of the orders of the House. The Government had proposed a method of meeting this difficulty, which of meeting this difficulty, which had been rejected. It now remained injuries were very painful no bones were broken.
