President Everett occupied the chair, and in a short address welcomed the teachers and friends. A treat followed in a piano solo by Miss Walker. Dr. Harrison addressed the gathering, dealing especially with the necessity of putting good literature in the hands of the pupils. It was received with a general ovation. Prof. Davidson spoke on the necessity of a study of psycology as a further aid to the teacher. He showed what might be gained by such study, how the nature of the child and pupil could be more readily known, its desires noted, and made it evident to the teachers that with psycological research, his mind would be quickened and his school work would be more beneficial. Mrs. Sharp sung a solo, and in responce to an encore, sung "The last rose of summer."
