CHAPTER VIII.

AN UNEXPECTED ARRIVAL FROM JAMAICA—
THE CONSERVATION OF STEPHEN AND MALCOLM.

"Who the deuce can this be coming to visit us on such a miserable day?" said Stephen, testily. "We want to be alone to decide on our course, and here is an ill-fated interruption. Who can it be?"

"Haven't the slightest idea," responded Malcolm; "but whoever it is they mean to make their quarters good for a while. Only see what an amount of luggage is strapped on the roof."

"Confound it, can it be any of the fellows of my mess?" growled Stephen. Doig could not come at Christmas, you know, and he promised us a visit some other time; but to come now is decidedly inopportune."

"Doig would never bring all those piled-up boxes with him," suggested Malcolm. "By Jove, it's extraordinary. Shall we have to meet them in the hall?"

"Certainly not. Whoever it may be, they are coming without being expected, and we shall stay till they are announced."

By this time the vehicle was sweeping across the spacious lawn, and at length it drew up at the grand entrance, full in sight of the brothers as they gazed from the window.

As the windows were closed and the blinds drawn, the inmates of the chaise could not be seen. Nor did they become visible till the driver descended from the box seat and opened the door, when there stepped forth a broadly built, dark-complexioned man, clad in an immense furred great-coat, with a shaggy-looking cap, who immediately turned about and handed out a lady, also enveloped in many furs which seemed to enclose a child.

"By Jove! a regular family party," exclaimed Malcolm, in the height of his astonishment.

"But who is it?" asked Stephen. "I don't recognize the man."

"Nor I. They seem Russians who have missed their way to Siberia. 'Pon my life we had better meet them in the hall, and show them they made a mistake. See, they are unloading the roof of that immense pile of luggage, and, as I live they are directing it to be carried in. Come, and let us intercept him."

"We are too late now," remarked the other. "They are in the hall already, and the servants are out."

"Egad, yes," added Malcolm, "and he is giving his orders like an emperor. Ah, here comes Thomas with a card; and, as I live, he looks as white as if a ghost had scared him. Well, Thomas, who are these arrivals?"

This question was addressed to an elderly serving man, who appeared holding a card in his hand, his countenance expressing total bewilderment and consternation. Unable to utter a word in answer to Malcolm's question, he advanced to Stephen and gave him the card.

The latter looked at it, and mechanically read the name aloud.

"Mr. Nathan Garret."

"Good heavens! the Jamaica manager!" exclaimed Malcolm.

"Yes, sir," faltered Thomas, "and he says the lady with him is—"

"Never mind. I will explain who she is," interrupted a loud voice, and Mr. Nathan Garret stepped into the room, his sudden appearance striking Thomas dumb, and causing all three to look at him in speechless amazement.

"You can go," added the new comer, addressing Thomas, and pointing to the door, "and see that the lady is attended to as I have directed."

In the extremity of his bewilderment Thomas obeyed the stranger's order, and quitted the room leaving the brothers still speechless with surprise.

BREAKFAST—EPPE'S COCOA—GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.—By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Eppe has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills.—Globe Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Each packet is labeled "James Eppe & Co., Homoeopathic Chemists, London." Also, makers of Eppe's Milky Cocoa (Cocoa and Condensed Milk).

Married ladies, under all circumstances, will find Parson's Purgative Pills safe; and, in small doses, a mild cathartic. The cause no gripping pains or cramp.

A fact worth remembering—have cents worth of Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Food, given to a horse twice a week, will save double that amount in grain, and the horse will be fatter, sleeker, and every way worth more money than though he did not have them.
