

LOVE-MAKING DONE FROM UPPER WINDOWS

HOW THE MEXICAN MAID KEEPS
WOULD-BE WOULDERS.

The senorita is a word with which to conjure in Spanish-speaking lands; and the Mexican senorita is not inferior in charms to her Spanish sister, according to modern Mexico. In fact, most of the upper class of Mexico is distinctly Spanish in appearance and bearing. Often, however, there is a slight mixture of Indian blood in the "white race" of Mexico, which very rarely detracts from the charm of the senorita.

Senorita signifies in Spanish a young, unmarried lady. In the past the ideas of Mexico with respect to women, and especially young, unmarried ones, have been more Moorish than anything else. And these ideas prevail still to a great extent—therefore the habits of Mexican women in the United States or England. On account of excluding women of all ages as much as possible from appearing alone in the public streets, and of more or less isolating them within their own families, there grew up in Spain and in Mexico among the middle and upper classes the custom of allowing women to make their appearance in the windows of the street for observation.

This was a long step in the advancement of women from the interior ideas of the Moors. In Mexico in the cool of the evening the windows of all the houses are opened along the streets, and hundreds of women, principally the young ones, appear there to view the carriages that pass by and to nod to their friends, and thus keep in touch with a world with which they are not likely to come in much closer contact; for the young men, or, for that matter, do not make a habit of visiting the families of their friends, and young men have to do their courting from outside the house. Most of the houses in Mexico were, but a short time ago, provided with windows heavily barred with iron, through which lovers saw one another. And although many of the modern houses are without these bars to the windows, the custom of making love from the window is still preserved. A young girl in Mexico could not commit a greater crime against social usage than to appear on the street alone with a man not of her own family. She understands this, and so she is careful not to go out of the house to see her lover, even though the windows have no bars.

THE TURNOVER CASE.

The turnover case is now the article most essential to every woman's toilet set. A very artistic one is of home manufacture, made of wide ribbon and a plain cardboard pad. First take an oblong strip of cardboard six inches by fifteen inches in length and cover on each side with a pad of cotton. Over the upper surface carefully sprinkle one ounce of violet sachet powder, and cover with another thin layer of cotton.

Next make a cover for the padded cardboard by sewing together two strips of form of a little case to fit the pad exactly. After placing the cardboard pad, wadded with cotton, inside the case cover, fully, sew together the open end of the pad, and then, about five inches apart, on each long edge of the upper surface of the covered pad, attach strips of baby ribbon to tie vertically across the pad, on the upper side of which the freshly laundered turnovers may be placed. The object of the strips of ribbon is to keep the turnovers in place when once placed upon the pad.

To the left side of the pad now attach another large strip of ribbon like that covering the pad and cut to fit it like the rest of a look. This forms a protective cover for freshly laundered turnovers, placed on the pad, and also serves the purpose of the sachet powder inside.

A case of this kind will hold at least a half dozen turnover sets, and will keep them in a freshly perfumed condition until ready for use.

FEATURES OF THE FORTY RACES THAT RUSSIA'S EMPEROR RULES

Blending of the Caucasian, Indo, Malay, Mongolian, Tartaric and Manchu—In Progress of Civilization They Come Out
White—Religions as Varied as the Races.

Japan, the island pigmy, at war with Russia, the white giant of the world powers, covering half of Europe and half of Asia, the historical marvel of the century.

No other empire the world has ever seen is so vast. No other empire has ever been so compact. The Roman Empire invaded three continents, but vast stretches of ocean and sea divided the kingdoms and weakened the centralized power of Rome. Charlemagne's empire was a kingdom in comparison. Napoleon's self-made scepter swayed for a few brief years a territory not one-third so vast.

The British Empire of today, mighty as it is in population, wealth and vigor, is scattered in four continents, and innumerable islands in all parts of the globe. Not so with the empire of the Czar. His is truly the realm of an emperor of emperors. Five thousand miles and more it stretches across the northern half of the continents of Europe and Asia. It covers more than one-seventh of the total land surface of the globe. Altogether there are 3,660,285 square miles of land—and ice. Russia has a population of 130,000,000. Of this number 106,000,000 are in European Russia. And these 130,000,000 are under a government in which all legislative, executive and judicial power is invested in the hands of one man—the Czar.

RULES FOR THE RACES.

In this mighty empire 40 languages are spoken by as many races, and the dialects are innumerable. The empire is made up of Russians, Poles, Finns, Lapps, Caucasians, Svans, Lesghians, Georgians, Tartars, Turkomans, Kirghiz, Uzbeks, Kirghiz-Kazaks, Yakuts, Osaks, Samoyedes, Giliaks, Kalmuks, Zungars, Tunguses, Lamuts, Orochens, Gols, Dzungars, Soyots, Tarchans, Tajiks, Uzbeks, Kirghiz, Chukchis, Kamchadales, Eskimos, Burjats and others. All of these races intermingle, and many of them are subdivided into lesser racial groups.

The religions are almost as diversified as the races. In European Russia the Greek Church rules. In Asiatic Russia there are Mohammedans, Buddhists, Jews and Christians.

These strange peoples live in environments but little better than those of the savages; but they are of a much higher intellectual type. Caucasian blood predominates in their veins. They are a blend of the Caucasian, Indo, Malay, Mongolian, Tartaric and Manchu, but under the progress of civilization they come out white.

THE RUSSIAN IS CONSERVATIVE.

Numbering above a hundred millions the Russians themselves differ widely in characteristics. Broadly speaking, the Russian of the interior, where the truest types of the race are found, is simple minded, of quick disposition, by nature more prone to good than evil, with unlimited faith in God, almost as strong a belief in fatalism or chance, and a remarkable trust in the wisdom, power and rectitude of the Czar. In spite of the nihilists and their sensational doings, the revolutionists are but a small minority of the people. The Russian is strongly attached to his customs and established institutions. He is naturally conservative, and to that cause his loyalty to the Czar is largely due.

Leaving European Russia and itself and passing to some of the allied peoples, and to the Caucasians, we find, as we come to the Caucasians, so full of races differing in religion, language, aspect and character, that it will only be possible to mention a few of the important tribes. The Svans, the lowest type, have never been subjugated by the Czar, who have successfully occupied the throne. The Ossetians live in the mountains, are wild, savage, insolent and inhospitable. They dress in furs and furs, and are as ugly in features as they are in disposition.

Of an entirely different type are the Georgians, who occupy the center of Transcaucasia. They are the noblest race of the country. More than any race in Asia, perhaps in Europe, they correspond to the ideal type of physical beauty. They have tall, slender figures, are clear skinned, with brown or black hair, and dark or gray eyes. Their physiognomy is strongly marked, owing to the broad, low forehead and full, oval face.

HAREM BEAUTIES.

Everyone has read of the beauty of the Georgian women. Regular, finely chiseled features, a complexion of large, liquid eyes and erect carriage, combining natural dignity with voluptuousness, are their general traits. They are numerous and influential, all the harems of the east, and their blood flows in the veins of Turkish, Egyptian and Persian grandees. The Georgian men, too, are good looking, but with a shade of effeminacy in their faces, expressive of their moral character. The Georgians are simple, hospitable people. They love ease and will not weary mind or muscle unnecessarily.

Next to the Georgians, the Czar's finest race of people is the Circassians. It has long been an axiom of ethnology that the Circassians are a magnificent race. Poets and writers of romance have made the charms of Circassian women the subject of their art. Travelers, however, the discoverers of their beauty is largely in the imagination of the poets and writers who have never seen them.

The Circassian man is energetic. He is always in a hurry, but he hates work. In spite of this he makes a good soldier, and many regiments in the Czar's service are recruited in Circassia. The population of Turkestan is composed of different races as blended as to produce a type differing from the primary stocks. There are many tribes, the principal ones being the Kirghiz or the Turkomans, and the Uzbeks. The Kirghiz men are great riders, being able to travel hundreds of miles apparently without fatigue. Spending most of their time on horseback, they acquire an intimate familiarity with all the aspects of plains and hills. They can find their way at night without the aid of the stars. They readily enlisted in the Czar's army and make dashing cavaliers.

The Uzbeks and Tajiks inhabit Bokhara, one of the Asiatic provinces of the Russian Empire. Few states of so small a size contain a population so heterogeneous for besides the Uzbeks and Tajiks there are Arabs, Persians, Turkomans and Jews. Most of the Uzbeks in Bokhara are engaged in agriculture and inhabit towns. Their manners are bold and straightforward. They are warlike in tendency, and as soldiers they are brave and dashing. They cultivate the music and poetry identified with their race, and arrange mock battles to celebrate great occasions.

MYSTERIOUS SIBERIA.

Siberia is yet the land of mystery. Popularly, it is supposed to be a country clad in ice, of dreary wastes of snow, barren plain and jagged mountains. This popular idea is not altogether correct. True, there are mountains and barren, deserts; but there are vast plateaus and immense stretches of fertile, well watered plains. The climate is extremely cold in winter and excessively hot in summer.

In Siberia there is room for 200,000,000 industrious people. At present there are scarcely 5,000,000. The natives of this strange and hardly understood country are ignorant, uncouth people, scarcely above the intellectual capacity of the savages. Naturally, however, they are of rugged and hardy disposition. Probably there are 25 separate principal races in Siberia. Of these representing the Finnish stock; the Kalmuks or Mongolians, and the Tunguses of Manchuria stock.

The Samoyedes are the most primitive and untaught of all the Siberians. Their domain lies within the Arctic circle. They dwell on the lands bordering on the Arctic Ocean. In physiognomy they are strongly Mongolian; in expression they are more like the Samoyedes. One of their most marked characteristics is honesty. The merchants of Tobolsk leave flour and fish in summer stations, unprotected. The Samoyedes take what they need, and when the merchant comes again they pay him.

The Samoyede is a peaceable being and eminently sociable. He will travel a long way out of his ordinary course to visit a friend or fellow tribesman. He is fond of games and treats women with great respect. Much different are the Kalmuks. They are described as ugly in appearance, cunning, dishonest and drunken.

A FEARLESS RACE. The Tunguses commend themselves much more favorably to travelers. They hold an enormous domain, stretching from the Yenisei River to the Pacific Ocean, and washed at two points by the waters of the Arctic. They form by far the most intelligent race in Siberia. Cheerful under the most depressing circumstances, persevering, candid and unassuming, they are a fearless race of hunters, modest and self-reliant. They have been called the nobility of Siberia.

The Ostiaks live in the country from the Ob River northward to the Arctic. In general appearance they are not unlike the Chinese. They are becoming more and more like the Russian peasants, and in time will be absorbed by that race.

Altogether, the Czar rules a strange assortment of peoples. To weld them all into a compact civilization, and to conquer the vast stretches of icy coasts, deep mountains, barren plains, tundra fields, and mountain ranges of the great empire of Northern Asia is a task that will require the statesmanship of centuries.

IT IS A LIVER PILL—Many of the ailments that man has to contend with, which is a delicate organ, peculiarly susceptible to disturbances, are due to irregular habits or lack of care in eating and drinking. This accounts for the great number of liver troubles, which there is no superior to Paine's Compound. Its effect is to purify the blood, cleanse the system, and the most delicate can use them.

If one could save a cent the first day of the month, and the next day 4 cents, the next, and so on, doubling the amount each day, he would have nearly three million dollars at the end of the month—providing the month had 31 days and his salary could stand the pressure.

A Norwegian chemist has discovered a new and cheap process for manufacturing alcohol from sawdust. Sawdust treated under pressure with diluted sulphuric acid by which the cellulose is transformed into sugar, which, by adding fermentation producers, is converted into alcohol in the old manner and then distilled. BEST WAY TO REAR HEALTHY CHILDREN

DEVELOP THEIR STRENGTH WITH FERROZON, WHICH MAKES
RICH BLOOD, HARDY MUSCLES, STEADY NERVES.

Children brought up on Ferrozon are known by their strong, rugged frames, their chubby cheeks and healthy appearance. Mothers find it an indispensable tonic and body builder, and in thousands of homes no other remedy is used.

Mrs. B. Montgomery, of Pittsburg, writes: "A little niece came to visit me, and noticing her pale looks and haggard looks, I started her on a course of Ferrozon. The change that girl underwent in a few weeks was marvelous. Her appetite chirped up, she had more spirit and strength, and a rosy color came into her cheeks that I never saw there before. I weighed my niece and she gained eight pounds, and just looked the picture of health. I think this should be an example to many mothers, and I hope that others will try Ferrozon for their little boys and girls. I am thoroughly convinced that it is the best blood-purifying tonic. It has my strongest endorsement."

The reason Ferrozon works so beneficially with children is that it acts directly on the blood, freeing it of all unhealthy matter, at the same time giving it an additional supply of iron. Most of the Uzbeks in Bokhara are engaged in agriculture and inhabit towns. Their manners are bold and straightforward. They are warlike in tendency, and as soldiers they are brave and dashing. They cultivate the music and poetry identified with their race, and arrange mock battles to celebrate great occasions.

Rolling Tea Leaves

There is always a certain amount of tannin in tea leaves—even in the delicate leaves that are used in

Blue Ribbon Ceylon Tea

To get this tannin out—it makes the tea taste bitter to leave it in—the leaves are rolled. The result is an absolutely pure and clean tea—clean because the process is all done by machine. That is why Blue Ribbon Tea—the Red Label Quality—tastes so deliciously rich and creamy—why it smells so fragrantly.

HIS LORDSHIP AND MY LADY

BY EPES WINTHROP SARGENT.

His Lordship was a good sort in his way. He was great at golf, could ride and knew how to handle a yacht. And he was not one of the sort that comes over here merely to marry the richest girl who is willing to have him.

"My Lady" is Grace Ormonde. I don't know who called her that, but she had all the airs and graces of the lady of the manor. All of us called her "My Lady," but the possessive case appealed particularly to me. I wanted to make her "My Lady" in fact, as, in truth, she had been ever since the day when as a boy in my first long trousers, I wrote to a resolution that Grace was the nicest girl I knew.

Everybody used to laugh at us when we both were children, because old Mrs. Ormonde, Grace's grandmother, approved the match. The old lady said the money, the rest all approved of what she approved. Then she went away, just about that time the poor father lost his money in the Ninth National crash, and Mr. Ormonde had a little chat with me about what was doing I had felt the whole truth out.

I didn't mind my words. They just came out in a torrent, and I am afraid that I was pretty plain spoken. I shouldn't have blamed him if he had knocked me down. Just as he stood there, his face growing as gray as the mist that veiled the sea. All of a sudden I realized what I had done and turned silent as suddenly as I had commenced. His Lordship made no answer to me but turned to "My Lady." "Is this true, Miss Ormonde?" he asked gently.

"My Lady" was crying harder than when he had seen it on the old man's dressing table at some house party in England. When he saw her in all her girlish charm, he was determined to marry her.

The formal announcement was to be made at the end of the Newport season. Then the Ormondes issued cards for a dinner to celebrate their victory over a woman's heart. It was to be a big event and I was among the very few not invited either to the dinner or to the ball to follow.

I met "My Lady" down on the rocks the afternoon of the dinner. There was a little nook far up the beach where we were free from interruption. It was a nasty afternoon, one of those late September days when the mist and sky and sea were into one mass of gray as though the whole world was wrapped in melancholy.

We sat silent for a long time. "My Lady" had been crying and Lancaster was up in arms on the instant. He was not a quick thinker in some ways and he got the idea that I was responsible for the tears in some way. That made me lose my head and before I knew what was doing I had felt the whole truth out.
